Winter Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

That Brick Here

Four East Hampton Kids Have Each Owned 1 Share of Disney For 20 Years

By Dan Rattiner

For twenty three years, with only one exception, I took my kids from East Hampton to Islip Airport and then to Orlando for a six day encounter with all the Disney characters. From the very beginning, I loved it and so did they. I still love it, but I finally called it a day when the two youngest remaining stood up (average height six two) and said we've had just about enough of Mickey and Donald and how about a snorkeling trip to St. John's. So that was that.

In any case, when we got home after that first trip, I started buying Disney stock. It was 1974 and Disney World was three years old. My kids at the time were five and three. I bought two shares at $3 each.

"You are now one of the owners of Disney World," I told these two kids. Ultimately, I had four kids and there were four shares of stock. Altogether I had, after paying the varying stock price, invested about $14.

"See that brick over there?" I might say to the youngest, Gabriel, when he was old enough to understand. I would be pointing to the brick frame around the entrance to the ten story magnificent castle with all the turrets where Sleeping Beauty was awakened by the Prince's kiss. "Maybe that's the brick you own."

I meant it too. And it was true.

Those four shares of Disney were the only shares of that company I ever bought. I still have them. They are in my name, and though there are no legal documents to support this, I know that I am just the guardian of them for my four kids who really own them. Someday, I will turn them over.

It's really an amazing thing what has happened to these four shares of stock in the thirty years since I bought them. In the first few years, it was Not Much. I'd get a big, glossy, full-color annual report in the mail at the end of the fiscal year along with a check for about thirty eight cents from Disney, which was their dividend. Sometimes I would cash it. Sometimes, just to be devilish and screw up their bookkeeping, I wouldn't. No big deal. The thing was, I loved Goofy and Minnie and Donald, but I didn't think much of the pencil pushers. I did think it was a great thing that somebody — Walt —had had the good sense to build this wonderful city for kids.

The price of Disney just kind of lay there for those first few years. Then it began to go up. Pretty soon, I was getting a dividend check for about two dollars and twelve cents. And it was about that time that an attempt was made by Disney itself to get me to divest myself of my four shares. This was around 1982. They wrote me a letter. They wrote me a series of letters. The essence of it was that I fell below the minimum of some certain size investor and it was a great expense and inconvenience for them to be carrying me on their books. I could surely understand that. There was the cost of the glossy annual report, there was the cost of the voting forms they had to send out to me, and the tallying of my four votes and so forth and so on, and so as an economy measure (and surely this would be good for the environment what with all the saving of ink and paper), they were offering me a premium price to sell them back my shares. I think it was almost double the selling price at the time, so I could help them clean up their books. Of course, there was nothing forcing me to do this, and I was welcome to decline the offer.

Then it began to go up. Pretty soon, I was getting a dividend check for about two dollars and twelve cents.

From my perspective, this seemed to be a polite request for me to give up my children's birthright. The hell with that. I politely declined.

And then along came Michael Eisner. He came in around 1984, I think it was, and on Main Street in the Magic Kingdom he put up an indoor display on the right when you first came in, across from a department store, where you could watch the first Mickey Mouse cartoon ever made, and see a black and white movie of Walt explaining his plans. You could see a display of Abe Lincoln, which worked on pulleys and wheels — one of the first animations at Disney World — and see a panorama of an upcoming theme park they were going to call Epcot. There was also a short video featuring the new President, Michael Eisner, who was, at that time, about 40. He was really neat. I thought he was just a grown up kid. And I loved how, on film, he seemed to be getting such a kick about Disney World. He'd make a good President of Disney, I decided. He'd be a terrific successor to Walt, who by this time had passed on.

Under Eisner's steady hand, my stock went up and up. The dividends kept getting bigger and the stock kept splitting. Sometime around 2000, it hit its high, which for me was about $20 for a dividend and 32 shares (after stock-splits) valued around $1,100. Right now, it's worth about $900. What a testament to Eisner. And what a testament to the benefits of owning a stock long term in America.

I should note that they had long since given up trying to get me to sell them back my pathetically small number of shares. That attempt had lasted just two years. Now, their annual report was on the Internet. Or if I wanted to I could request a hard copy and they would have to send it to me. Mercifully, I made no such request.

As for Eisner, my hat and mouse ears are off to him. He has built about twenty hotels around the Magic Kingdom, two adjacent theme parks, an Animal Kingdom, a sports complex, Pleasure Island, an oceangoing cruise line, more Disney Worlds in Tokyo, Paris and I don't know where else, and one of the three or four greatest movie studios. Orlando, meanwhile, has gone from a small agricultural transportation town of about 15,000 people to a city of almost a million. It's the fastest growing city in America. All from the income of things that make kids happy.

Last week, they had the annual stockholders' meeting for Disney in Philadelphia, and tens of thousands of people demonstrated outside and inside, demanding Eisner's ouster, demanding that he not be ousted, demanding that Disney accept the takeover offer from Comcast, demanding that Disney fight the takeover offer from Comcast, demanding that Walt Disney's nephew be ousted. There were also people there, aware that all this would be getting television coverage, demonstrating about other things. There were people there against abortion, people demonstrating against people wearing fur, people demonstrating against the International Monetary Fund, people demonstrating against the war in Iraq. In the end, Eisner kept his post as President. But he lost the more meaningful post of Chairman of the Board.

I say, cut Michael Eisner a break. Maybe he's getting a little crotchety and cranky in his old age. He is, after all, in his sixties. Maybe he does have trouble with the Jeffrey Katzenbergs and Steve Jobs of the world. Maybe he's not cut out to be the czar of some great media empire. Maybe he just likes being around Mickey and Goofy and the rest of them.

Be nice to him. He's done right by them.

As for me, I say anytime he wants to come to East Hampton, he's welcome to stay at our house and meet some pretty happy stockholders of Disney, owners of a brick here, and a weather vane there, who are now all grown up and off doing other things. I relay that information to Michael, from them, as their financial Disney stock guardian advisor of the last thirty years. He's got our vote.

Chairs Be Gone!

Sag Harbor Starts A Crackdown Downtown On Sitting Down Anywhere

By Dan Rattiner

Sag Harbor, that beautiful, charming old whaling village, can't seem to make up its mind if it wants people to come to town or not. For years, it has pursued a policy of trying to slow down the traffic that speeds through the community to get to the ferry stop three miles up at the dock at North Haven. They've blocked the roads with speed bumps, bicycle lanes, roundabouts. They've even narrowed the roads. Slow down. Maybe stop off and get a bite to eat or do some shopping.

Driving in your car is one thing, however, and walking around downtown is another. This, they want to speed up. Get you in and out. About four years ago, the Village began cracking down on sidewalk obstructions. No window boxes, no flower planters in front of the stores, no benches or wooden cigar-store Indians. Anything that might slow the pedestrian traffic had to be removed, otherwise, there were stiff fines. For awhile, you couldn't even sit out front on the patio of the American Hotel.

Now the Village wants to see to it that once in the stores, you can't sit down. Get in, buy something, get out, get to your car, get out of town. They have issued summonses to the Java Nation for having several stools in the store. They have gone after the Dock House on Long Wharf, the Bagel Buoy on Bay Street, the Italian Espresso Market, and others, for similar transgressions. It isn't easy visiting downtown Sag Harbor. Your feet hurt. There's no place to sit. If you've been there in the last week or two, you've got to have noticed it. A chair was here. Now it is gone.

> Probably came from the old nineteenth century American concept of a rich person paying a poor person to serve in his place in the military.

The logic of all of this, if you ask Mayor Hance, is that there has to be good traffic flow, both pedestrian and vehicular, and there has to be a place to park your car. The question is, however, if you have a place to park your car but you have to keep moving once you get there, why go there? Or maybe the Mayor is so confident that the town is so loveable and charming and cute that the ultimate visit might be a drive-by. Look! We're in Sag Harbor. (Pause.) Wasn't that cute?

The law that is being used to remove all the places to sit down, excuse me, the illegal places to sit down, is kind of convoluted. In the 1980s, a law was passed saying that if you wanted to open a store downtown you had to provide a certain number of parking spaces on your property — a good idea — or if there WAS no place to park on your property — pony up $7,500 a person, figure three in a car or $22,500, to excuse yourself. A good idea. Probably came from the old nineteenth century American concept of a rich person paying a poor person to serve in his place in the military.

Soon this law was embellished. If you wanted to open a restaurant, you had to either provide parking or pay a certain sum per seat for not providing a parking space outside for your diners. A restaurant with more than the paid-for number of seats would be fined.

Today, in Sag Harbor, there are more than just restaurants that need seats. There is a health food market with a sit-down cafe in it, a fish market that sells fish sandwiches as a sideline on Long Wharf, a bakery that has a few seats in it and delis that sell cappucino. I'm told that the North Fork Bank has opened a branch in Manorville on the site of the old Grace's Hot Dogs Restaurant, and it has a Starbucks stand in it. People sit. They fill out deposit slips while they sip Mocha Malt Triple Shot DeCaf Frappacinos. This has gotten very complicated.

In Westhampton Beach, they hang enormous plants of petunias on the street lights every summer. They shine up the benches. The merchants put their wares out front of the stores market fashion. Welcome to Westhampton Beach.

Where Sag Harbor is going is traffic obstructions, maybe a fake accident and an ambulance to tie things up, a parking spot and free roller skates. Get in. Shop. (Hop around while trying on clothes in a boutique.) Buy. Get out. Come again. •

HOPING FOR

A HOT AND SUNNY SUMMER?

(Be careful what you wish for!)

Here's to a glorióus summer, but the hotter and sunnier it is, the more you'll need the protection of Sunesta Awnings from East End Awnings. Our awnings are strong, water-repellant and available in over 200 beautiful colors and patterns. Sunesta awnings have no ugly confining braces or upright poles and the retract easily, either manually or with the push of a button with an optional motor.

They'll shield you from the brutal sun, provide soothing, sooling shade and beautify your home, all at the same time. (And maybe prevent a few wrinkles, too.) We hope you get exactly the weather you wish for this summer… just be careful!

Who Gets Married To Whom?

The Problem Is Not Who Gets Married But What It Means To Get Married

By Dan Rattiner

So, are you in favor of or are you opposed to gays getting married? Most people, after they tumble it around in their mind for awhile, say yes or no. I say, just exactly what do you mean by married?

The last time I looked, people getting married still get up in front of everybody in a room and are asked, do you promise to live together and love the other person, love, honor and cherish, promise to have and to hold, be faithful and true, through thick and thin and rich and poor and sickness and health, now and forevermore until death do you part?

They say yes. About one in ten thousand say no, this is a big mistake and there is a big ruckus and to-do about it, but that's another story entirely.

I take the vow of marriage at face value. It must mean what it says because there is a very official and important person asking these questions of the two parties. It means that the two people agree to sleep together and make a home and a family together, for the rest of their lives and nothing will come between them. This is not a fairy tale.

In the old days, maybe fifty years ago and before, it meant that one person goes out and works and makes the money, which is brought home and shared with the other person, who takes care of the home and the children. The jobs, one of nurturing, the other of hunting, are equal. And the biological person who has the babies, the woman, promises that she will see to it that all babies she has are biologically also the babies of the man, who does not have babies. Thus the wedding ring. She's married. Stay away.

Now I have no problem with what has happened in the last fifty years. The woman can be the breadwinner and the man can be the househusband. Or both persons can work, and often do, and there is babysitting and nursery school going on and that is okay too, though maybe not quite so good for the kids. I am also okay with in-vitro pregancy and adoption and gay marriages where neither or both people can bear offspring.

The trouble is with how many different things "marriage" now means. Religious lead-

MARTHA STEWART, SAM WAKSAL, BERNIE EBBERS...

By Dan Rattiner

Martha Stewart is a well known figure in the Hamptons. About 15 years ago, she bought a house on Lily Pond Lane in East Hampton, and a few years later, bought another house, the abandoned Gordon Bunshaft designed house on Georgica Pond intending to fix it up. But after a series of run-ins with her West End Road neighbor, Harry Maclowe, regarding property lines and plantings, last July put the house on the market. It's remained unsold.

During the time Martha has been here, she has gone from being beholden to Time-Warner, who owned her magazine, to being an independent and successful entrepreneur whose net worth rose finally to exceed more than a billion dollars. She is a tough businesswoman and is reportedly difficult to work for. She demands, and gets, the kind of near-perfection that one would expect from someone with her domestic expertise.

Now she has suffered a huge disaster because of a decision she made about the value of her reputation. She could have simply told the truth about what happened, that she had heard that Waksal was selling his stock. She would have been fined and that would have been the end of it. That, however, would have tarnished her reputation. She could not have that. And so she denied and covered up and took her chances.

But there is another story here. The gap between the rich and poor in America is now growing dramatically. We need that gap to give those less fortunate something to strive for. America is the land of opportunity, after all. And Martha Stewart is an example, having raising herself up from lower middle class beers of one faith have one set of laws about the breakup of the marriage, religious leaders of another religion have other laws about it. Some religions damn violators to hell. Others say forget about it and move on. The states describe marriage differently from one another, and within that, there is San Francisco and New Paltz, New York, where the Mayor just got arrested for performing gay marriages. Even different countries now define it differently. Italy, for example, until twenty years ago, said that if you promise it is forever, then you are held to it. No divorce. Muslim law allows a man to punish a wife physically, by beating her with a soft switch if she misbehaves. (One month ago, a mullah in Spain published a how-to guide to successful marriage and was sentenced to 19 months in prison for writing about beating your wife.) In the Mormon religion, a man can have lots of wives. In some countries in Asia, large numbers of wives and kids are considered the mark of a very rich man.

All this is very interesting, except that if you get married under one set of rules and then decide you want to get a divorce, you can get a divorce in another place abiding by a different set of rules. They don't have extradition. Nor do they honor the terms of the original contract. A few years ago, a well known actor, I forget his name, had a long time girlfriend he lived with in a state where they do not have common law marriage. (Together five years? You're married.) He went to Louisiana for a two week film shoot and he and his girl friend lived in a motel. A month later, his girl friend applied for Louisiana common law marriage status because the two weeks constituted legal residency in that state. I do not know how it turned out. But in other words, it's a free for all.

Now I am not challenging "marriage" here just to make trouble. I am doing this for children. Because it is the children, if any come from a marriage, who are completely neglected as the definition of marriage has evolved. There should be FEDERAL laws in America that say if parents can't live up to the very serious vows and responsibilities they took on, then the vow-breakers should at least be required to live within ten miles of the children they made and report periodically to a parenting probation officer. People sign legal contracts all the time and are held to them. That's why they call it a marriage contract. Otherwise it is — who knows? — Marriage Light?

As for Marriage Light, that can come in many, many different forms, and I think there ought to be a menu of options available to those who are considering tying the knot. Decide on your knot ahead of time. Know what you are agreeing to. The Europeans have largely given up on marriage, as you might know. They have civil unions and significant otherhoods and common law status and whatever people want.

Many of the terms are definable, legal and contractual. Somewhere in there, there's at least one definition by which where any two people can get the equivalent of all 1,700 benefits that we give to "legally married" people in America.

And so, I think the problem is not "gays." It is "marriage." Define "marriage" as it was traditionally meant to be defined. Find other words to describe what almost everybody, gays and straights everywhere in America, want, from a great menu of terms. Everyone should be able to get a legal piece of paper that says something acceptable. They should, if they want to, legally welcome a child into their family. They all should get tax benefits, child deductions, joint tax returns, reciprocal hospital visits, wear rings, get nice looks when they rent hotel rooms, choose not to have any children if they don't want to, and agree to share themselves and their wealth with the other, not sleep around, and be true until death do them part, or, do any of the above, as selected from a menu of choices that everyone gets to agree on. But don't call any of them "marriage." There's already a definition for that. Give them all new names.

If you want to opt for the most expensive thing on the menu, MARRIAGE, then you should know you will be held to the highest standard, and if you fail, be liable to fines, sex-offender status, be-near-your-children ankle shackle probation, prison terms or eternal damnation in hell, whichever comes first.

We don't NEED "marriage." We can have it if we want it. But if we don't want it, and we want something else, let's name it something else. And, straight or gay, don't say the old "marriage" vows at the ceremony. Say what goes with the combination of things you chose on the very lengthy contractual menu. And stick to that. •

Serious Beach Erosion In Sagaponack Is Blamed On Jetty At Georgica Pond

By David Stoll

"I am witnessing a disaster area." So says Roy Scheider of Sagaponack, whose beach is suffering from serious erosion. So, too, are the beaches west of his, all the way to the large rock groins erected two miles away at Georgica Beach. Mr. Scheider, along with Sagaponack attorney Gary Ireland and the environmental activist Group for the South Fork, contend that the Georgica groins are responsible for the erosion of the Sagaponack beaches, and they are using legal process and grass roots advocacy to persuade politicians to remove the groins. Mr. Scheider urges immediate action, saying that "There is no longer time for another beach survey." Just as his Jaws character Brody warned Amity mayor Vaughn of the danger in the ocean, Mr. Scheider wants to raise consciousness on the East End, pointing not to a great white shark, but to a controversial rock wall.

Many beach protection scientists agree that groins can cause erosion to beaches immediately down-drift of the groins. A groin is a rock wall erected perpendicular to the beach and extending into the ocean. The groin slows the currents moving along the shore, which on Long Island run east to west. Slower moving water cannot carry as much sand, so the excess sand that had been carried in the current is released before the groin, thus providing more sand for natural beach replenishment before the groin (in this case, at Georgica Beach). Because some sand has been removed from the current, the beaches immediately to the far side of the groin (the eastern Sagaponack beaches) are deprived

SPALDING GRAY, 62, REMEMBERED

By Dan Rattiner

Spalding Gray, the performance artist whose body was found in the water off Brooklyn last Saturday, bought a home in the Hamptons about fifteen years ago to settle down and raise a family with his new wife, Kathy Russo.

"It has a white picket fence. I can walk to downtown. It's got history, small town charm, everything I ever wanted," he told me happily at the time.

Spalding Gray

Spalding Gray is somebody I greatly admired from the first time he burst upon the scene in Manhattan, performing Swimming to Cambodia. He had done performances before, long monologues about his personal life and experiences. But it was this three-hour performance depicting his time as a minor actor in the making of the movie The Killing Fields about the Vietnam War — it was filmed in Thailand — that brought him to my attention.

It was a brilliant piece. He sat at a table, with a pointer, some notes, a glass of water and a map behind him, and he basically did a breathtaking outpouring of his most personal feelings, sometimes whispered, sometimes shouted, always as a funny description of the craziness of the making of this movie. About how his girlfriend didn't want him to go, about how she did want him to go, about how he almost drowned, about bullets and explosions going on all around him.

That was 1987. Spalding was 45. I was 47. If there was ever anybody who did the kind of work that I did, but succeeded with it beyond anybody's wildest dreams, it was him. He became for me a role model. I never thought I would meet him. But then he moved here.

In real life, I found him to be cynical, funny, peckish and mercurial. He was, it seemed to me, a classic WASP New Englander gone haywire. It was nice to know he was in this community.

of that sand, thus potentially exacerbating erosion.

The Georgica groins were erected in 1965 by the Army Corp of Engineers, following intensive lobbying of local, county, state and federal officials by the late Juan Trippe, who was the chairman of Pan Am. The house then owned by Mr. Trippe is located just to the west of Georgica Beach, sitting over the Atlantic Ocean and Georgica Pond. Apparently, Mr. Trippe believed that the groins were necessary to create additional beach and thereby protect Georgica Pond — although perhaps this was the case of "one privileged man," as Mr. Scheider contends, moving the machinery of the government for his own benefit. The groins were erected in front of the Trippe house.

With the celebrity support of Mr. Scheider, the Group for the South Fork and Mr. Ireland are seeking signatures for a petition addressed to President Bush to direct the Army Corp of Engineers to remove the Georgica groins. The Army Corp of Engineers — which was established in 1775 by the Continental Congress to build fortifications near Boston at Bunker Hill — has been engaged in a variety of studies since 1994 to determine what to do to protect the 83 miles of beaches between Fire Island and Montauk from hurricanes and erosion. This study is not expected to be completed until the end of 2005 at the earliest; and then the recommendations will take years to be approved and implemented. Group for the South Fork President Bob DeLuca insists that it will most likely then be too late, because beaches in Sagaponack will be a memory, and beach-front houses will have been destroyed.

Mr. DeLuca and his organization believe in keeping beaches natural and are generally opposed to the erection of any hard structures proposed by property owners. (Indeed, the Group for the South Fork opposed the St. Andrew's Dune Church's application for a permit to erect a revetment in front of the Church; as reported in this paper two weeks ago, although that permit, in that special case, was granted by the Southampton Village.) But Mr. DeLuca emphasizes that, in the case of the Georgica groins, he and property owners are on the same side, working together.

There is no question that the eastern Sagaponack beaches are suffering from erosion. Yet, all of the East End beaches have suffered from erosion at one time or another, so one may ask why special, immediate and expensive action should be taken for this relatively small stretch of beach, access to much of which is reached only by private roads. Mr. Scheider answers that the South Fork depends on summer tourism, which exists because of the beaches. He says that something needs to be done about the groins, because if the East End beaches start to disappear, then the tourists won't come.

Mr. DeLuca offers an additional reason for quick action. He believes that the problem is having a pernicious effect on local politics. He points out that the impetus for the establishment of new villages, such as Dunehampton and Sagaponack Village, is the disappearance of the beaches and the resulting risk to the beach-front properties. Mr. DeLuca worries that as soon as one Sagaponack house is damaged or destroyed during a storm, Southampton Town's rules against beach-front hard structures will fall and the creation of a new village will succeed.

The erosion of the eastern Sagaponack beaches does appear to be quite severe. If it is the case that the Georgica groins are the cause and the beaches will not be able to repair themselves — and, indeed, will continue to erode — without intervention, then it does seem that some sort of immediate action is required. Perhaps removal of the Georgica groins is the answer, although it is not clear what effect that would have on Georgica Pond. Another solution might be one similar to that which worked well near Westhampton Beach: the erection of properly spaced, progressively shorter groins to the

What St. Patrick's Day Means To A Bunch Of Local Elementary School Kids

By Janet Berg

"Tis that time of year again, when the lines down Main Street are painted that shade of emerald in wait of the big parade; when different legends are uttered among town folk; and when many are counting the days until the first sign of spring. Mmmm . . . I can almost smell the bloomin' bouquet right now — the sweetest thing God ever made, and forgot to put a soul into — Henry Ward Beecher.

In honor of the patron saint of Ireland, we have observed March 17 in homes, churches, schools and places of entertainment in America since colonial days. So, I thought I would ask the local children, ages five through twelve, at the First Presbyterian Church in East Moriches, their take on the celebration, and here's what they had to say:

Q: WHO IS SAINT PATRICK?
A: Christopher Durst, Age 7, from East Moriches. "Umm, the Leprechaun King."

Q: WHEN DID THE FIRST IRISH PEOPLE COME TO AMERICA?
A: Leland Qua, Age 5, one of the twins from Remsenburg. "March twenty of April, 2004."

Q: WHAT WERE THEY LOOKING FOR?
A: Leland, again. "A place to live . . . and food."
A: Tyler Crohan, Age 11, from Jamesport. "They came because of the potato famine and the people were starving to death."

Q: WHAT COUNTRY ARE THE IRISH FROM? AND WHAT IS IT LIKE THERE?
A: Leland, but again. "South America. It has trees and mosquitos."
A: Genevieve Herbert, Age 6, from Eastport."I think it looks like a big giant island, and it's always sunny there."
A: Daniel Qua (5-year-old, who I can't tell apart from his twin brother, unless I search under his bangs for a small, distinguishing freckle). "There's bananas there . . . and monkeys," he answers with a serious face.
A: Christopher, Age 7. "And big apes, looking to steal the bananas," he answers with a less serious expression.
A: Emma Herbert, Age 9, from Eastport. "There's lots of meadows."

Q: WHY IS GREEN THE FAVORITE COLOR OF THE IRISH?
A: Leland, Age 5. "It's my favorite lollipop!"
Q: Noah LeBrun, Age 7. "'Cause four-leaf clovers are green."
A: Daniel, Age 5. "Cause they like salad so much."

Q: WHAT IS THEIR FAVORITE FOOD?
A: Daniel, Age 5. "Greeeen pizza."
A: Noah LeBrun, Age 7. "Steak and chicken fajitas."
A: John Montefusco, Age 12, from Center Moriches. "Green eggs and ham."
A: Christopher Durst, Age 7. "They eat Leprechauns."

Q: WHAT DO THE IRISH PEOPLE LIKE TO WEAR?
A: Genevieve Herbert, Age 6. "They like to wear black and wear tap shoes."
A: Leland, Age 5."They wear all white."
A: Genevieve, again. "No, I've seen Irish people before . . . in the parade, and they wear curly wigs on their head, too."
A: Christopher, Age 7. "They're naked!"

Q: DO YOU HAVE ANY IRISH ANCESTORS?
A: Leland, Age 5. "Mommy."

A: Genevieve, Age 6, shrugs her shoulders."My cat and my hamster."
A: Daniel, Age 5. "I don't have any ancestors, 'cause I'm just a little bit Irish."

Q: WHAT DO THEY MEAN BY "THE LUCK O' THE IRISH?"
A: Christopher, Age 7. "They have magical powers, like if they fall, they can reverse time and get back up."

Q: THE IRISH BELIEVE IN GOOD LUCK CHARMS, A RABBIT'S FOOT, AND HORSESHOES. . . CAN YOU NAME SOMETHING ELSE THEY'D USE?
A: Leland, Age 5. "Umm . . . a duck's foot."
A: Christopher, Age 7. "Lucky Charms, the kind that you eat."
A: Leland, Age 5."I know. How about a bare foot?" With no shoes and socks on?" The twins giggle, "Ha ha . . . yeah!"

Q: WHAT IS THEIR NATIONAL EMBLEM?
A: Leland, Age 5. "The telephone."
A: Andrew Montefusco, Age 8, from Center Moriches. "Their flag is green and white and orange."
A: Christopher, Age 7, starts humming a song.

Q: IF YOU'RE NOT IRISH, CAN YOU STILL GO TO THE PARADE?
A: Matthew Crohan, Age 9, from Jamesport. "Yes, 'cause it's a free country."

Q: WHAT IS A LEPRECHAUN LIKE?
A: Genevieve, Age 6. "They love to swim in the water and every year they come and turn my toilet water green."
A: Christopher, Age 7. "I met one. I was looking at a four leaf clover and all of a sudden it moved up out of the ground, and I caught him, but he wiggled out of my hand, and I chased him in circles. He ran on top of our roof and he slipped into the gutter and he thought it was a water ride. Then I went into my room and there was an entire army of leprechauns."
"HOLY COW! The other kids scream.

Q: WHO IS THE LEADER OF THE IRISH?
A: Genevieve, Age 6. "A reeeally tall girl."

Q: WHY DO YOU SEE PEOPLE WEARING SHIRTS THAT SAY, "KISS ME, I'M IRISH?"
A: The kids shriek, "EEEEWWWW."
Q: IF YOU COULD MAKE UP A SHIRT, WHAT WOULD IT SAY?
A: Christopher, Age 7. "I'd put a picture of a naked leprechaun on it."

Q: SO, THE LAST QUESTION, LADS AND LASSIES . . . WHAT IS THE "RIVER DANCE?"
A: One at a time, the children bolted from their chairs and danced around the room at Sunday school kicking their feet in delight. •

Kate Winslet and Jim Carrey in Montauk

The Montauk Project

Jim Carrey Movie, Filmed Here, Moves Backward And Forward Through Time

By Robin F. Smith

The latest Jim Carrey movie is not a "Jim Carrey" movie. Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind, shot on location in Manhattan and Montauk last year and opening today, is a daring and outrageously original love story. The production came to town for three weeks in March 2003, booking 60 rooms at the Montauk Manor. Exteriors were filmed at the train station, the Plaza Diner, the Ocean Surf Motel and on Kirk Park Beach.

Much more mind-bending than face-bending, Eternal tells the story of a romance, from the end to the beginning, through the loopy, non-linear memories of Joel Barish (Carrey), who, having found out that his ex-girlfriend, Clementine (Kate Winslet) underwent a type of brain surgery that permanently erased any memories of him from her mind, is enduring the same procedure. Most of the movie takes place inside Joel's head, as he and the viewers relive his relationship in backwards order, seeing first the times of exhaustion, frustration, disillusionment and disappointment that ultimately destroyed their love affair, and then all the fun, passion, understanding and attraction that brought them together in the first place. When Joel realizes, well into the procedure, that erasing sad times also erases the happy times, that denying Clementine's existence is also denying a part of him ever existed, and all the existential implications of these life-altering changes he is instigating, he wants his memories to stay where they are. Only it is too late to stop Dr. Mierzwiak (Tom Wilkenson) and his kooky assistants (Elijah Wood, Mark Ruffalo, Kirsten Dunst) from following through on the contract. Joel's brain thus moves Clementine, pushing her into other memories where she doesn't belong, in the hopes that the mind eraser machine won't find her there.

> "Montauk in the snow, in the dead of winter, is the perfect backdrop for two people taking time off from life"

Written by Charlie Kaufman (Being John Malkevich and Adaptation) and directed by Michael Gondry, who is most noted for his creative music videos for artists such as Bjork, Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind does not show the Hamptons as usual, the brightly lit, glorious Hamptons of films like Something's Gotta Give. Instead, the melancholy atmosphere of the film, underscoring the themes of longing, loss and isolation, was captured in the bleak beauty of Montauk in the winter. But the foot of snow that fell a few days into the exterior shoot threatened to add an unwelcome element of surrealism to the already bizarre story taking place in a dramatic landscape.

Originally, according to producer Anthony Bregman, the script called for the Montauk scenes that occur in the present to be shot in the snow. This was a device intended to help the viewer with the timeline of the story, because it jumps from the past to the present and back again, over and over. Additionally, "It actually was perfect for the story. Montauk in the snow, in the dead of winter, is the perfect backdrop for two people taking time off from life, feeling alienated and going off somewhere to escape, yet wallow in, these feelings," Bregman says. However, manufacturing the amount of snow they needed was just too expensive, and the snow was written out.

But much like this year, last year was an unexpectedly snowy one on the East End. After a few days of shooting in grey but dry conditions, the cast and crew awoke at the Montauk Manor Resort to find that there had been a blizzard during the night and that "The End" was now pure white as far as the eye could see. Some decisions had to be made. Fast. "The problem," Bregman explains, "was continuity. Since scenes are shot out of order, and we had already started shooting, the snow would occur randomly in the movie. And even if we tried to explain the truth, that there was no snow one day and then the next day there was a foot, it would be too unbelievable, difficult and distracting on film."

So instead of relying on the snow to differentiate the past from the present, the weather element was instead used to show the passage of time. "Clem and Joel had a two year relationship. During their relationship, they came back to Montauk a few times, and there was different weather. Once, when they met, they were at a bonfire and it feels like fall. That ended up being early in the shoot, when there was no snow. Next they came out to have fun in Montauk, playing in the snow together. Then, when he returns in the present, it is snowy and cold again, and a different year, and he is alone." All along, Joel is experiencing a wild and intense crossover of memory, both real and distorted, and Montauk locations figure prominently.

Scenes shot in the "beach house" were actually filmed in a home in Wainscott, but all the exteriors were shot on the beach in Montauk using a replica of the house that was built by the crew. In fact, the crew also built replicas of the living room, dining room and staircase and all these sets sat right on the Montauk beach. At different points in the film, rooms in the house fill up with snow, or sand, or float off into the ocean, and eventually, the house itself collapses. The filmmakers were uninterested in using special effects. They were instead committed to shooting the movie in an almost documentary style, in order to offset the outrageousness of the subject matter and add an element of "what if..." believability.

"We already had a very unusual plot and script. And the entire premise of the movie is so high concept that it was imperative to make everything else about it very realistic and organic," Bregman explained.

The effects of the elements were so real, in fact, that during a late night shoot, around 2 a.m, the freezing cold, pounding surf kept prematurely knocking down the staircase set, according to one eyewitness, who braved the cold to see what the excitement was all about. "Kate and Jim were troopers," he said. "Even though they were visibly shivering and shaking, I didn't hear them complain a bit. And I was standing right next to them." The director got the shot.

Jim Carrey, Kate Winslet and the supporting cast handle the complicated material brilliantly, and Gondry directs Kaufman's challenging and complex script into an energetic and coherent whole that is so subtly emotional, you don't realize until it's over how moved you are. Whether or not you are local, you will find Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind to be a fascinating examination of time and place, both real and remembered. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #289
McPope

With St. Patrick's Day fast approaching, it's time for all the Irish in America to pause and reflect on our heritage. All non-Irish may stop reading at this point since outrageous claims based on only bits of truth will now follow.

First off, it was just the Irish, with maybe a little bit of help from other immigrant groups, who built most of New York City. The Brooklyn Bridge is a world recognized icon of NYC. Multiple other buildings and bridges taking up more than half the city were all built by the Irish, who all remained sober the entire time, thank you very much. The Irish built the railroad across this country to its meeting point in Utah with the railroad from the west built by the Chinese.

The Irish alone, with no public funds, built St. Patrick's Cathedral. It takes up an entire city block! Irish immigrant children collected pennies and thousands of men donated labor to have the cathedral built. Since the British had once forbidden the Irish to practice their Catholic faith in Ireland, the immigrants were determined to erect a magnificent church to spite all those who once oppressed them.

The cathedral is not only a national treasure, it is, more importantly, the starting point of the St. Patrick's Day Parade! The Archbishop of New York blesses and starts the parade. If you are of Irish descent, you're probably presently Catholic, or a recovering Catholic, and even if you're orange Irish (the non-Catholic Irish), you still feel the authority of the Church. Just stop and think how difficult it would be to organize thousands of celebrating Irishmen without the one authority that could just say, "Now look boys, yer startin' here."

Ireland has been 98% Catholic for over 1000 years. It all started with St. Patrick, who came over to convert the pagans. Before St. Patrick arrived, it was all fighting, drinking, wild fertility rituals, human sacrifices, slavery, raping, pillaging, sheep thievery and other fun pagan activities. Most of the population was content with a completely hedonistic life style. But St. Patrick took one look around and realized that spiritually, Ireland was stranded up an unsanitary tributary with no viable means of propulsion. The good times simply had to end. In the course of his 98 year life, he civilized the Celts and established hundreds of churches, schools and several universities.

St. Patrick tamed everything in the Irish but the drinkin' and the fightin'. But didn't that work out too? As General Lee told a northern general in the Civil War, "The only reason your side won was because you boys had more Irishmen than we did."

I think, based on loyalty and past performance, the Vatican should acknowledge the Irish by electing, when the time comes, an Irish Pope. I think Pope Paul Liam the First, or Pope John Seamus the First, just has such a nice ring to it. He could have his headquarters in St. Patrick's Cathedral. I'm sure they could find him an office. Plus, there's probably as many Italian immigrant descendants in New York as Irish ones and many of the New York Italians and New York Irish have cross bred, creating a double threat of passionate people who would love a local pontiff. It would really boost tourism to NYC. HBO could start a new series, Pax in the City. It could be about four women of four different faiths, who do unselfish things for people. It would make for shocking TV no doubt, but since Janet Jackson, I think the country can handle anything that pops out on TV.

Happy St. Patrick's Day to all the Designated Drivers and Designated Drinkers!

ginnings, through a modeling career, to a catering business she founded and ran, and then to homemaking expert guru. She created a whole new way of homemaking. And ultimately, through TV, her magazine and her merchandising, made herself a billionaire.

And now, new income tax laws see to it that the rich can keep more of the money they make.

This involves huge sums. Bill Gates' net worth is more than that of many foreign countries. The hoarding of wealth in the hands of a few is growing.

How does a person reconcile losing a well-paying job for a minimum wage job, knowing of all the income tax breaks for the rich? He looks at the rich, and if one of them breaks a law and he is on a jury to judge them, well, that's what happened to Martha Stewart.

This is a cautionary tale. In America, the Republicans and Democrats are not too far apart and over time, the pendulum swings toward business or labor, as we hold election after election. The government needs huge sums of money in taxes to support the social services it provides. One decade the rich pay a higher proportion, another decade the rich pay a lower proportion.

The other day, I read a very alarming article in Harper's Magazine, written by two economists, about America's ongoing budget deficit. Forget that the burden of providing enough funds is falling more on the less fortunate these days. The total of the funds is not enough and hasn't been enough for years. We could raise taxes or cut services, but we don't do either. So we borrow. What are the consequences, long term, of always borrowing and never repaying?

These economists, after describing some very complicated scenarios, suggested that ultimately, these deficits will shake the freedoms this country stands for. If the deficit is not reined in, we will be a country of a few superrich people and a huge population of poor. The middle class will be gone. And when that happens, the superrich will live behind gates with guards out front and Draconian laws to keep the poor in line. The United States will have turned into Argentina, a country as rich in natural resources as ours, but where those in power are the wealthy families who run a government that periodically goes bankrupt trying to provide even token public services for the populace.

I have always tried to keep an open mind about politics. At various times I have voted Republican, at other times I have voted Democratic. I still think that Reagan executed a very good plan in bolstering big business and creating well paying jobs that trickled down the system during the 1980s. But today nothing is trickling down the system. The trickle is going in the other direction. Bush says jobs are being created but they are jobs that do not pay enough for people to live on. He says he has engineered a tax cut, but it is a tax cut for the rich. This is so misleading as to appear cynical. Ultimately, apparently, it can be dangerous, cutting sharply into our democratic way of life.

Fortunately, we live in a land that not only has the checks and balances of the pendulum swing, but a democratic process whereby the people's voice gets heard.

I don't know if George Bush will get re-elected or not; there are many factors to consider, but as far as the economy is concerned, and the public's tolerance for the rich who lie and cheat during a time of general hardship, change is in the wind. And that is what Martha Stewart learned last week and what Andrew Fastow and Dennis Kowalski and poor Bernie Ebbers, who cheated and lied but forgot to sell his stock to cash out and so went bankrupt with everybody else when he got caught, will learn too. Wealthy businessmen with net worths in the billions are having their feet held to the fire. It is hopefully the start of something that will result in a sea change. Time will tell. • west of the Georgica groins.

Whatever the correct answer, it seems clear that chasing after the Army Corp of Engineers will lead nowhere. Both Mr. DeLuca and Mr. Ireland explained that the Corp is widely regarded as uniquely non-responsive to political pressure and slow to act. And it is difficult to imagine that the petition to President Bush (or any president) will succeed. If the economic and political rationales offered by Messrs. Scheider and DeLuca demand fast action, then it is the Townships and County that must act. Indeed, although the Army Corp of Engineers erected the Georgica groins, Mr. Ireland believes that this was done only after Suffolk County exerted considerable pressure and indemnified the Corp from any damage that might be caused by the groins. Moreover, Mr. Ireland understands that the County owns the groins.

Thus, it makes sense for our local representatives to take action to solve a local problem. So, while Mr. Scheider supports the efforts of Mr. Ireland and the Group for the South Fork to seek action from Washington, D.C., he also urges that the "Towns handle this" and asks why "citizens have to start a grass roots effort." After all, he asks, "What are we paying taxes for?" •

I never really got to know Spalding well. I spent some time once with him and his wife and kids down at the beach, interviewing him at the suggestion of Christie Brinkley about his support for her fight against nuclear power in the area, and he did it. "Publicize the fight," he told me. But it was an awkward time and he really wanted to spend it with his family and I felt I didn't want to intrude.

I visited him at his home once, and I also met him a few times at the Ross School in East Hampton. We both had kids there. At an event in 2002, the last time I saw him, he looked like a wild man, very disheveled and frightened. He appeared not to even know who I was.

Gray had been in a terrible auto accident in Ireland the year before, and had only slowly recovered from a fractured hip, a head injury and a nearly severed spine. But it was the head injury that was the worst. He had suffered a fractured skull, and a piece of glass, since removed, had gone through his forehead into his brain. There were visible facial scars. And where in his monologues and his personal life he had always teetered between life and death, he was now becoming more and more obsessed with death. He tried suicide. Twice he attempted it by jumping off the Sag Harbor Bridge, once having to be talked down and once jumping but getting rescued by police who pulled him out of the water. Both times it was in winter.

He had sold the house with the picket fence and he and his family had moved into a new house in North Haven. Spalding said he saw witches there. Spalding said he would die there. He was sometimes in emotionally unbearable pain, he said.

In spite of an outpouring of help from his family and the community for what was now clearly a deeply disturbed man, he disappeared from the community on January 10, calling home later in the day to tell his son Theo, age 6, he loved him and would see him soon.

He was soon reported missing. Police traced that last call to a phone booth at the Staten Island Ferry. People said they saw him on the ferry. Then, last Saturday, his body was found in the ocean just off Greenpoint, Brooklyn. He was 62.

I prefer to remember seeing Spalding Gray under a big white fundraising tent on the lawn of the Parrish Art Museum in Southampton, performing a two hour long monologue entitled "Monster in a Box" to a standing room only crowd. He sat there at the table and caressed this white cardboard box which contained, he said, his 1000 word novel. From time to time he threatened to read from it, but when the time came, he would digress into another aspect of the experience of writing. There was always something. Friends. Agents. Distractions. He had torn out sections and rewritten them, he said. Once he burned the manuscript.

For people who have never seen what he contributed to American letters, I say go and get a DVD of Swimming to Cambodia and watch it. He is an amazingly fearless non-stop talker, sometimes explaining things darkly, sometimes conspiratorially or outrageously and hilariously. He is as funny as Robin Williams at his best. Funnier, I think.

I offer my sympathies to his family. He was a brilliant man. His work will never be forgotten. •

BREAKING NEWS

Melissa Kennedy, 21, was last seen on February 20 when she stopped a car in midtown Manhattan, got in and disappeared. She had been home from Bard College for a visit to her parents in Brooklyn. They filed a missing person report.

Now it turns out that Melissa "had an angel over her shoulder," according to her mother. Melissa, angry and upset with her parents, had gotten into a car being driven by Dennis Schmidt of Southampton, whose family runs the Schmidt's Market in that town. He is 26 and a well-respected young man in town. She asked him to drive her to his home. She was upset and wanted to think. He did.

According to Mr. Kennedy, Melissa spent two weeks at his home, and then called the Southampton Police after she learned that her worried parents had posted a $10,000 reward for information about her.

There was nothing amiss, she said. She just ran away from home. She has reunited with her parents and all is well.

She intends to head back to school shortly.

Dan's North Fork with Susan Whitney Simm

North Fork Critics' Choice 2003

The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Dining Destinations

And The Winner Is...

I think it is safe to say that Dan's Papers annual Best of the Best contest has indeed achieved institution status on the East End, and while we all know it's not who wins or loses, it's still a lot more fun to win. And speaking of winners, 2003's lucky award recipients are spotlighted below. Just look for the designation at the end of each restaurant description, and follow the key to find out who won what. The list is impressive, but then so are today's dining options here on the North Fork.

–Susan W. Simm, Dan's North Fork Editor

2003 North Fork Best of the Best Winners

A-Ambiance, B-Bistro, Br- Brunch, C-Chef, Ch-Chicken Dish, Cu-Cuisine, D-Décor, Di-Dinner Specials, I-Italian Cuisine, L-Lobster Dish, Lo-Long Island Wine Selection, Lu-Lunch Menu, Me-Mediterranean Cuisine, O-Outdoor Dining, N-New Chef, P-Pasta, Pu-Pub, S-Salad, Se-Seafood Restaurant, Ser-Service, Sh-Shellfish Dish, Sou-Soup, Spe-Special Occasion Dining, St-Steak, Su-Sushi, V-Vegetarian Dish, W-Wine List, Wi-Wines by the glass.

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03). {Di,S,Sh}

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [Br,D]

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03). {Pu}.

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

La Plage. Exciting and imaginative haute cuisine just steps away from a Long Island Sound beach. Chef/owner Wayne Wadington's menu undergoes constant revision, reflecting his selection of premium ingredients or his latest inspiration for a sauce. His creations fly off the menu almost as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance, put in for the Yukon Gold potato soup with an oyster beignet, the roulade of local crab with succulent micro greens or the Griggstown Farm quail in smoked bacon. Superb wine list. Exceptional desserts. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 11/1/02). [Ap,Ch]

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [D]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [Lo,Se,Su]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). {A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W}

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03). {Lu,N}

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.) {Me,V}

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). {L,O}

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppresata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). {C,I,P]

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London. Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03). [St].

Dining On The North Fork

La Plage

Creek Road, Wading River

Turn north on exit 69 off the LIE and drive for ten or so minutes, through the sleepy hamlet of Wading River, and when you reach the edge of Shoreham Beach, a charming restaurant welcomes you. On a recent damp, chilly evening, La Plage glowed like a beacon with its candle-lit tables, warmth of welcome, and tasteful background music. The scene rapidly brought about a sense of relaxation and renewal.

Over the past eight years, Wayne Wadington, the youthful owner and chef, has built a stellar reputation as one of the best of Long Island's restaurateurs, offering a very imaginative menu backed up by preparation and presentation of the highest order.

We didn't even have to choose our menu for Wayne had agreed to serve a tasting menu, focusing on some of his current dishes, together with others that will find their way onto the menu in the weeks ahead.

We started with an amuse bouche consisting of a fried oyster with an artichoke puree and lemon aioli sauce. This was a crisp, succulent delight with a perfect melding of flavors. We drank a Solatre 2001 Pouilly-Fuisse, one of the five white and six red wines available in half bottles (something many other restaurants could copy!). The wine was a great example of a crisp Burgundian Chardonnay and was served at the perfect temperature to best appreciate its delicate complexity.

A salad of roasted red beets with blood oranges, baby asparagus, and endive in a sage vinaigrette was a perfect foil for wonderfully tangy and full-bodied chevre (goat cheese).

We followed this with some lightly seared sea scallops with a very tasty blue crab mille feuille and black trumpet mushrooms paired with a kaffir lime sweet pea-based sauce that brought the dish to perfection. This was without any doubt one of the best-ever scallop dishes we have been privileged to enjoy. The bread served at La Plage comes as crispy, piping hot rolls and as we ate them and mopped up the sauce, we had to feel sorrow for those following the current fad of diets abstaining from breads, pastas and potatoes. Is it really worth it?

As we moved to taste some excellent yellow fin tuna excitingly paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash with a sweet corn butter sauce and crispy yams, we realized that Wayne has not lost his cutting edge approach of using unlikely combinations to construct wonderful dishes. The selection of a Willamette Valley Pinot Noir from Oregon was another excellent choice, being light and fruity with a long finish.

Poached lobster came next, served with a potato ravioli and Himalayan truffle sauce, and the dish showed how even an apparently humble potato ravioli can play its full part in a complex dish such as this. For a meat course, we were delighted to try Wayne's rendition of three different forms of pork. Neiman Ranch tenderloin wrapped in Bayonne ham, served with braised wild boar, was a perfect late winter dish which, to use an old English expression, really 'warmed the cockles of our hearts', whatever they may be and if indeed they still needed warming by this time!

Now all this time we had been congratulating ourselves that Wayne was being kind to us and only sending out tasting portions, but we should have realized that when it comes to desserts there never is any holding back an imaginative chef, and Wayne tantalized us with an array of desserts beyond belief. Warm chocolate-centered banana bread pudding, warm apple butter crepes, Tahitian vanilla crème brulee, decadent chocolate cake with an espresso mousse, all looking too good to eat and too tempting to totally resist. So if anyone saw a couple walking hard along the seafront later that evening, it was a pair of restaurant reviewers trying to work off the effects!

A dining room with a view

La Plage is currently open for dinner Wednesday through Sunday. Salads and appetizers range from $9 to $16; pastas and main courses from $23 to $31. They have an interesting wine list from $22 and up with wines by the glass from $7 to $8.50. Reservations are recommended. You will probably want to get the directions anyway. They maybe offering a prix fixe soon, so let them know if this would be of interest to you.

Wayne Wadington is to be congratulated on making his dream come true, even though he maintains that he still has a way to go. His relentless pursuit of excellence in every aspect of his restaurant means that he never rests on his laurels. His cooking should be experienced by anyone who really enjoys food. The dishes, though they sound complex, are very well thought out and researched and they really work. Above all his sauces are a prime example of what separates amateur cooks from a top professional. La Plage is a destination restaurant rather than a casual choice, and really lends itself to celebrations of all types.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Against the Ropes, 50 First Dates

Tracking the careers of actors who work the silver screen is as tricky as combing through the hazardous tangles of Meg Ryan's hair-dos and role choices. Just months ago, she stripped her soul and body bare in the sticky-tacky In The Cut (revealing nothing new or rousing). I thought that was the lowest cut of all, until her current fight game movie of plug-ugly pugilism. In a broad, and I do mean "broad" performance, she wears "Erin Brockovich" squeeze 'em together lace up bodices, tight miniskirts and 5 inch heels that have her staggering Against the Ropes and possibly toppling out into an audience of empty seats. Not even a Frederick's of Hollywood bra could make this feeble and sagging feminist movie uplifting. Advertised as an inspirational "true story" of the first woman to successfully manage prizefighters – it can only give boxing movies and women a black eye.

Ms. Ryan doesn't have the shoulders, arms or restraint to come out of this thing with so much as a technical O.K., let alone a K.O. Even if she had the muscle, this fictitious paper bag isn't worth fighting her way out of. I'm confident that the actual Jackie Kallen (whose story this movie started with) has an infinitely better story than what this movie has prefabricated after the fact. Clichés upon clichés take it on the chin, as Meg's Jackie refuses to continue fetching coffee for her boss at the Cleveland Coliseum who uses her as a punching bag for his mistakes while taking credit for her ideas. He is played by Joe Cortese with real piggish style, but Tony Shalhoub, as the local kingpin of fight promotion, gets his kicks by making a pig of Jackie. Never mind – Jackie hangs in there and is soon managing boxers with the help of the steadying, semi-retired trainer whose damp sweatshirts are filled admirably by Charles S. Dutton, who had the thankless task of directing the film.

Jackie, at least as interpreted by Meg Ryan, fights male discrimination by swinging crudely in a grating, fakey tough gal style that makes corny lines like: "Pearls are pretty and they're tough. Pretty Tough can do anything," sound almost palatable. Not tasteful is the clumsy, prepared for takeout inspirational message soured by Ryan's hooker styling. Dignity is added by Omar Eppes, as the hard-punching middleweight that Jackie bails out of trouble and gives a shot at a title. Having little to do, Kerry Washington, with one hand tied behind her back, gives her small role as Jackie's assistant and Eppes' love distraction some solid footwork on a very oily canvas that has Meg Ryan slipping-slipping-away-away-away.

Hot on the trail of Drew Barrymore, you find her on a climb upwards – sure and steady, easily winning without strain or pain. As Meg is going South, Drew is headed in a completely opposite direction, up and up, with performances that are on the up and up honest. In her latest, 50 First Dates, she takes the role of an amnesiac that could have been gooey-maudlin, and endows it with a dazzling emotional glow that elicits a romantic spell that pulls even Adam Sandler up and out of his low, gross humor status quo to new heights of charming warmth. She drags him, initially, kicking and screaming through the usual gunk like a vomiting walrus and Rob Schneider's slob and a Sandler movie's compulsory scatology and sex jokes.

Set in Hawaii, Adam as a marine mammal veterinarian is stranger in paradise than most. Too, there is his sexually ambiguous assistant, Lusia Strus, (receiver of the vomit), also strange. Strangely, along comes Ms. Drew, whose doctor, Dan Aykroyd, has to remind her daily that a car accident has left her without a memory factor. When Adam meets Drew in a diner, he's smitten immediately, and almost as immediately, she is taken and *un*taken with him because of her lack of memory. Hence, the 50 First Dates. The touching attempts by Sandler to woo and re-woo Drew takes on an emotional pull as strong as Maui's Ocean tide. And, stranger than that is Ms. Barrymore's ability to transform a clanky vehicle into a high flying glider that travels noiselessly over obstacles like the memory of Groundhog Day and the forgettable remembrances of past youth films that are as unfortunate as an automobile accident.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

ARTS - IN - EDUCATION: VIDEO VISIONS
Part 6

Question: What do students who were finalists in the media presentation, Video Visions, at Guild Hall share with Ron Howard and Stephen Spielberg? Answer: They all made films /videos as youngsters in the public school system.

We're not saying that our local participants will go on to fame and fortune, but they are certainly being encouraged by The Hamptons International Film Festival and LTV, both of which gave the directors special awards. Good for them. And the students. And good for Guild Hall for including media in its 12th Annual Student Arts Festival.

Having run various national student film festivals in the 1970s, yours truly is a firm advocate of recognizing young media talent. Most importantly, however, is the recognition of media production as a viable and valuable course in the public school curriculum, a phenomenon, unfortunately, that reached its height during the 1960s.

It's time to bring media making back into the classrooms (like East Hampton High School has done).

That said, the Video Visions presentation showed what can be done, given commitment from teachers, administrators and students alike. All the finalists had something good going for them, but this critic's favorite was My Enchanted Neighbor by Springs Elementary School pupil, Nick Grille.

While it appeared to be a straightforward documentary, with the camera as a simple recording device, the work's aural qualities were ironical and insightful, although we're not sure the participants were fully aware of the gem they had made. Juxtaposing Nick's simple questions to his elderly neighbor with the man's complicated piano playing was extraordinary.

Conversely, the high school students concentrated on editing, which makes good sense considering the fact that they are probably devoted music video fans. We can't help but notice that secondary camera movement (notably pans) needs some work. No matter. The unstable camera adds a touch of reality.

East Hampton High School student Bianca Massi expressed another valuable talent: researching her topic, Greta Garbo. The smooth transitions between photographs, archival material and film clips showed an in-depth approach to her subject matter, even though her piece was only five minutes long. Thus, editing of another kind was the point: deciding what to keep in and what to keep out. Our hats (and lens caps) off to media students everywhere.

Honoring the Artist: Debbie Sampson

Florida resident Debbie Sampson is one of those rare artists whose specialty is sports. While she's known for her "action" paintings of members of the Marlins and Panthers hockey team, Ms. Sampson is no stranger to other sports as well.

Cover Art

One challenging activity was her involvement in martial arts, an endeavor she pursued for 14 years. And yes, she did work with the likes of Chuck Norris, whom she described as only "two inches taller than I am ." (She's 5 feet, 2 inches.)

While she found martial arts challenging enough, Ms. Sampson was also one of the few female judges for kickboxing competitions. "I had to give that up," she explains. "The men hated women judges, and I had to be twice as nasty as a result."

Ms. Sampson's favorite sport, however, concerns horses. Or, as she puts it simply, "I'm passionate about them." Not only did she own horses from time to time, but she claims that, according to her mother, her first word was "horse." Ms. Sampson got her first pony when she was 12, and at 15, published her first horse painting.

However, a knee injury kept Ms. Sampson away from her beloved animals for awhile; in fact, she says she was told she would never walk again. But she was determined to prove the experts wrong, saying "Someday I'll get back to it." A simple procedure finally proved that her injury was fixable, and she's been mobile ever since.

Ms. Sampson's involvement with horses extended beyond these experiences; she also showed jumpers in competition. "I was what you'd call a "catch" rider," she comments. "I would ride a horse if someone got sick. Fortunately, I was able to figure the horses out quickly."

This week's cover work reflects Ms. Sampson's love of horses. And why not? She has had plenty of time to observe them as they (and she) would wait for hours for their event to start. "I saw this particular animal, which is a polo pony, at a show in 1996," the artist notes. (Often, her oils of horses will include real objects, like a horse shoe, but the cover work is not one of these.)

Ms. Sampson descibes her pieces as "surrealistic," although she says she creates in a variety of styles. What makes her paintings special also are her use of either a brush or palette knife.

And what does the future hold for Ms. Sampson? "I would love to get involved with the Olympics," she answers quickly. We have a feeling she will.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Sampson can be reached at her website: www.artsports.com Her work will be on view at The Art Fair, July 2, 3, at The American Legion in East Hampton.

broadway theatre review: fiddler on the roof... by jan silver

Although the new production of Fiddler on the Roof cannot resurrect Zero Mostel, the brilliant singing, dancing actor who rekindled the embers of early 20th century shtetl life on Broadway as Tevye the milkman in 1964, it is still one of the American musical theater's great shows. Playwright Joseph Stein, composer Jerry Bock and lyricist Sheldon Harnick capture the essence of famed Yiddish author Sholem Aleichem's stories of Jewish life in the small Russian village of Anatevka just before the Russian Revolution, and translate them into characters whose words and music hold meaning for everyone. With most of the original choreography, staging and direction of the late, masterful Jerome Robbins intact, this is an uplifting theatrical experience.

Alfred Molina, an accomplished stage and screen actor probably best-known for his portrayal of Mexican artist Frida Kahlo's controversial artist husband Diego Rivera in the movie Frida, has the monumental task of taking on the role of Tevye. Being a tall and commanding theatrical presence, he certainly does not have the appearance of a humble Russian milkman, and his three-sided conversations with God do not have a Yiddish inflection, but he captures Tevye's love for his wife, daughters, and village, and Tevye's respect for God. By the middle of the first act, Molina has ushered the audience into Tevye's world.

Director David Leveaux, Tony Award-winner for last year's revival of the musical Nine, treats Fiddler with respect but wants it meaningful for current audiences. He has directed the writers to create a new song, "Topsy-Turvy," in the second act for Yente the matchmaker ((Nancy Opel) to express the villagers' unease with their changing world. The original song at this point in the show, "The Rumor," had that gossipy Yente disclosing the contents of a private letter to Tevye's daughter Hodel. (Yente spreads the news and it becomes totally distorted as it passes around the village, illustrating the destruction of lives through gossip.) "Topsy-Turvy" foreshadows the revolutionary changes these Russian Jews will face.

Fiddler has a large cast of characters. Randy Graff is fine as Golde, Tevye's hard-working wife and the mother of his five daughters. Nancy Opel is suitably meddlesome as Yente and David Wohl is well-cast as Lazar Wolf, the widowed butcher who wants to marry Tevye's oldest daughter Tzeitel (Sally Murphy).

A pivotal point in Tevye's world is his daughters' wishes to marry for love and not to have arranged marriages. This greatly alters the "Tradition," described in a grand opening-number introducing the villagers and customs of Eastern European shtetl life. Tzeitel wants to marry her childhood sweetheart, Motel the tailor (John Cariani). Second-born daughter Hodel (Laura Michelle Kelly) is somewhat intellectual and falls in love with her tutor Perchik (Robert Petkoff), a revolutionist from Kiev. Third daughter Chava (Tricia Paoluccio) falls for a sympathetic Russian, Fyedka (David Ayers), which is definitely forbidden. Marrying out of the religion, Chava's request breaks Tevye's heart and he sings of his grief over losing his daughter in "Chaveleh" (Little Bird).

The themes in Fiddler are timeless and they still resonate. The entire cast interweaves smoothly as an ensemble. The well-known songs ("Tradition," "Matchmaker," "If I Were A Rich Man," "To Life," and "Sunrise, Sunset") come like old friends, and others remind us of the joys and depths of human existence ("Do You Love Me?" and "Far from the Home I Love").

Jerome Robbins' stylized choreography for the villagers' dancing is still infectious, but with the orchestra seated in the background, stage right, it takes space away from the leaping, twirling Russian male dancers in the tavern scene. The all-male bottle dance at Tzeitel and Motel's wedding is still wonderful, yet Motel's shyness and fear of Tevye have been turned into a caricature. How could a composed Tzeitel, who has the nerve to ask her father to go back on his word, fall for this Motel who comes across as a spastic teenager?

The spare, evocative set design is by Tom Pye and turn-of-the-century costumes by Vicki Mortimer. Brian MacDevitt's lighting design heightens the drama, especially for the Sabbath scene, Tevye's dream scene and Hodel's departure. Kevin Stites leads the orchestra and violinist Nick Danielson, in costume as the Fiddler, hovers in and around Anatevka, foreshadowing events with his plaintive music.

Fiddler on the Roof is at the Minskoff Theatre, 200 West 45th Street. Performances are Tuesday at 7 p.m., Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m. Tickets are available at the box office or through Ticketmaster at 212-307-4100, 800-755-4000 or www.ticketmaster.com.

The New York Cabbie Cookbook

Dashing from cab to cab in her work as a theatrical, TV and film costume designer, Mary Ellen Winston asked New York taxi drivers if they had some favorite recipes they would like to share. What followed wasn't just bored mutterings, but enthusiastic outpourings of treasured recipes from one end of the world to the other. These cabbies were bringing the smells and flavors of their hearts and homelands to a passenger in the back seat. Mary Ellen's collection of international recipes is not only authentic, but many are relatively easy to prepare. The book also includes some interesting Big Apple trivia.

With each cab driver you learn their country of origin, profiles and memorable fares, like when a cabbie picked up Jackie Onassis and Senator Jacob Javitz. The same cab driver, originally in the fur business, started driving a cab on Saturday nights to pick up a little extra cash. He raises show cats now; "I don't know why that always surprises people." Another recalls picking up Frank Sinatra and driving him to Jilly's restaurant in the days of the "Rat Pack."

The New York Cabbie Cookbook, Running Press, 2003, boasts a fountain of appealing dishes for the adventurous as well as hearty, homestyle recipes. For seafood lovers there is a marescada, chock full of mussels, shrimp and scallops from Spain; Greek style shrimp scampi from Greece and a rich-tasting Turkish vegetable soup. Use your leftover rice for fried rice with egg from China, or make perfectly cooked basmati rice from Afghanistan; cucumber salad from Indonesia and carrot salad from Algeria; Irish soda bread and middle Eastern flat bread; and cassata, the Sicilian special-occasion pound cake from the Italian neighbor-lady down the street.

There's so much to bite into as Mary Ellen Winston and co-author Holly Garrison invite you to take home a slice of the Big Apple.

SEBZE GORBAS

Turkish Vegetable Soup
By Ismel Akbal from Turkey
Makes about 8 cups

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 - 3/4 pound beef chuck, cut into small pieces
1 med. size zucchini coarsely chopped
1 baking or boiling potato, coarsely chopped
2 slender carrots, thinly sliced
2 celery ribs, chopped
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon crumbled dry oregano
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1/2 pound plum tomatoes, seeded and chopped
2 cups hot beef broth mixed with 2 cups hot water
1/4 coarsely chopped fresh parsley

1. Heat the butter and oil together in a Dutch oven or other large heavy stew pot over high heat. When it is hot, add the beef, and cook, stirring and turning, until the meat has lost most of its red color. With a slotted spoon remove the meat to a bowl and set aside.

2. To the fat and juices remaining in the pan, add the zucchini, potato, carrot, celery, onion and garlic. Cook over medium high heat, stirring almost constantly, until the vegetables have begun to cook down and soften, about 10 minutes. Stir in the oregano, salt, and pepper. Stir in the tomatoes until well blended. Return the beef to the pan along with any juices that have accumulated in the bowl. Stir in the hot beef broth and water, bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce the heat, cover, and simmer for 30 minutes. Stir in the parsley, and serve in warm soup bowls.

FRIED RICE WITH EGG

Wilson Eng from China suggests adding cooked diced shrimp, chicken or Chinese cooked roast pork to this fried rice classic.
Makes 4 servings

2 cups long-grain converted white rice, rinsed.
Salt
1/4 cup oyster sauce
2 tablespoons light Japanese soy sauce
3 large eggs, beaten until blended
2 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
1 cup frozen baby peas, thawed
2-3 scallions, thinly sliced including some of the green tops

1. At least a day before you plan to make the fried rice, place the rinsed rice in a heavy medium-size saucepan. Add 4 cups cold water and salt to taste. Bring to a boil over high heat. Cover, and cook at a gentle boil until water has cooked down to the level of the rice. With a spoon, stir the rice well. Cover and reduce heat to low. Continue to cook for about 15 minutes, or until rice is tender. Fluff with a fork. Cool to room temperature before refrigerating covered for 24 hours.

2. Break up any clumps of the cold rice with your fingers and set aside. In a small bowl stir together the oyster and soy sauce, and set aside.

3. Coat a large skillet with non-stick vegetable spray and set over medium high heat. When the skillet is hot, add the eggs, swirling them around to make sure they coat the whole bottom of the pan. Cook, without stirring and adjusting the heat as necessary, until the eggs are firm and cooked through but not yet starting to brown, lifting the skillet and tilting it so the eggs cook evenly. Slide the eggs onto a plate and when they have cooled cut into small pieces.

4. Return skillet to the burner, and heat the oil over high heat. When it is hot, add the peas and scallions, and cook, stirring constantly, until the scallions are limp, about 1 minute. Stir in the rice, sauce mixture, and eggs until well mixed. Continue to cook, stirring, until the rice is heated through, 1 to 2 minutes. Serve.

Tweeds Restaurant and Buffalo Bar has announced their "eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow you dine" winter special. Simply bring in any 2004 Tweed's lunch or dinner receipt and receive 25% off that night's dinner. Tweed's winter special will be honored any Sunday through Thursday evening now through April 5th. The discount only applies to the meal and does not include liquor, tax or gratuities. Also in Tweeds news, the Riverhead eatery has been selected to be part of the Culinary Institute of America's prestigious Externship Program. The program chooses high quality restaurants all over the country to employ culinary students as they are finishing their formal culinary education. The program invites only the most professional, quality-oriented kitchens to be part of the program. For further info on the happenings at Tweed's call 208-3151.

If you're looking for a backdrop to your next special event – wedding, corporate event, bar/batmitzvas, bachelor/bachelorette party or rehearsal dinner – Pacific East in Amagansett would like you to keep them in mind. A mere one mile from the ocean, Pacific East is equipped with three private rooms and three outdoor areas. Pacific East is open year-round and available for both on and off premise catering. To ensure special attention, the restaurant will host only one event per day. Additionally, privacy is guaranteed. In fact, it has been reported that various celebrities and VIPs have elected to host events at Pacific East...and mum's been the word. Pacific East is capable of hosting events for 20 to 600 people. For details call 267-7770.

Hamptons Restaurant Week is coming up soon (the last week of March - March 28th through April 4th). All participating restaurants will offer their own three course prix fixe for $19.95, all night every night of that week, except Saturday when it will be offered from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Many restaurants will offer a special discount on bottles of Long Island wine. Check www.hamptonsrestaurantweek.com for a complete list of restaurants and vineyards that have presently signed on, as well as lodging and retail business that will offer discounts for that week. Also new for this year, Hamptons Restaurant Week will begin with a benefit cocktail party at Della Femina restaurant in East Hampton on Sunday, March 28th from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m. Join local chefs and restaurateurs, wineries and other Hamptons Restaurant Week participants for some cocktails (cash bar), delicious nibbles courtesy of Della Femina, and the soulful jazz sounds of Starlight Tyler & Company. Admission is $25 at the door, payable by cash or check, and proceeds will go to the Suffolk Community College Culinary Arts Program. Admission is free for businesses participating in Hamptons Restaurant Week.

The Cigar Bar, in Sag Harbor, not only has fine cigars and delicious cocktails, they also serve cappuccino, espresso and French press all night long. Stop in and enjoy a cup by the new fireplace while you surf the internet or legally smoke indoors. That's right! Cigar Bar is one of the last places to legally smoke in New York Sate. Call 725-2575 for more info or log on to www.hamptonscigarbar.com.

Yet another reminder that OASIS Waterfront Restaurant and Bar (725-7110) reopened last Friday, March 5th. The upscale Sag Harbor eatery is now open Friday through Sunday for dinner beginning at 5:30, with brunch on Sunday from 12-3 p.m.

Located at Gurney's Inn in Montauk, The Sea Grille has a $24.95 sunset dinner available seven days a week, with seating offered between 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Patrons can choose from a four course gourmet low carb or spa dinner while they watch the sun go down over the Atlantic Ocean. For further information or for reservations, call 668-2660 or log onto www.gurneys-inn.com.

Recipe For Romance

Valentine's Day is long gone but that doesn't mean romance should fall by the wayside until next year. A romantic dinner at home with that someone special is an experience not soon forgotten. That's right, your own home may very well be one of the most romantic spots on Mother Earth.

There's nothing quite like an intimate meal "chez toi." No waiting for your table, you select the music, the libations (champagne or sparkling cider) and menu; no wait staff to deal with and it's all at a fraction of the cost of going out.

Set the tone. Tidy up a bit, add some fresh flowers and candles and let the night move at its own seductive pace. If you have a fireplace, use it! Nothing sets the mood better than a crackling fire burning in the background. Romantic music wafting in the air also helps to set the mood. There's Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade," John Coltrane's "My Favorite Things," Andrea Bocelli's "Romanza" and, of course, anything by Barry "The Icon of Love" White. Get the picture?

Try to avoid complicated recipes you've never cooked before unless you are sure you can pull it off. Rule out the drama of a tableside flambé or the valor of a three-hour oven braise. Focus instead on simple, warming dishes that will delight with their understated elegance. Even a novice can thinly slice roasted beets and toss them with baby spinach and sprinkle with blue cheese, stir a spicy and aromatic pot of Long Island-style cioppino brimming with local catch and whip up a sinfully enchanting dessert.

When love is on the menu. The table should be sumptuous and inviting – not the white tablecloth of restaurants – but exotic and elegant. Consider a colored vase to hold sterling (purple-hued) or pink roses that will accompany a smattering of unscented votive candles set in round glass holders dotted around the room. Drape the table in a complementary fabric and set out linen napkins. Gold rimmed plates or your favorite plate on a charger will work, too. You can buy what you need at import or discount stores for reasonable prices or use your imagination and improvise.

Now, for dinner. Discard the leafy greens from a one-half pound bunch of beets. Wrap beets in tin foil and place in 425-degree oven until tender, approximately one hour. When beets are done, remove from oven and let cool. Slip the skins off (you might want to consider gloves to avoid pink fingertips) and thinly slice. Just before serving assemble baby spinach on salad plates, top with beets, sprinkle with Gorgonzola cheese and serve with Balsamic vinegar and fruity good quality olive oil.

I can think of nothing better than a fish stew as the perfect centerpiece for this occasion. Normally, stews wouldn't be paired up with romance in a word association game, but cioppino is different from others. A modest assortment of shrimp, mussels, clams and cod make a fine adaptation of this traditional Italian specialty.

To start, heat 2-4 tablespoons of extra-virgin olive oil in a large kettle over moderately high heat 2 minutes. Add 1 cup chopped onions, two garlic cloves minced, one bay leaf, 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, and 1/2 teaspoon dried basil and cook, stirring often, until onions are golden, 8 to 10 minutes.

Add 14-ounce can crushed tomatoes, one pound jar salsa (mild or spicy), one 8-ounce bottle clam juice, and 1/2 cup dry white wine; bring to simmering, adjust heat so mixture bubbles gently, and cook uncovered just until flavors meld, about 20 minutes.

Add 1/2-pound cod and 1/2-pound shrimp and cook uncovered just until shrimp turn pink, fish almost flakes and clams (6) and mussels (12) open, about 5 minutes. Remove bay leaves, season to taste with salt and pepper, then serve with rough country bread.

With love in the air, no evening would be complete without a rich chocolate dessert. If your aim is to woo your sweetie through food, then cap the evening with Chocolate Fondue. To make you'll need long-stem strawberries (and/or other fruits) one-pint whipping cream, a 14-ounce bar of Lindt bittersweet chocolate (or a comparable brand) and 1-2 tablespoon orange liqueur (though hazelnut is nice, too). Slowly, while stirring, melt the chocolate with the cream. When smooth, stir in the liqueur of your choice and let the dipping begin. Where it leads, is up to you...

KENNY GORDON FOUNDATION

Ben Affleck, Jon Gordon, Kevin Smith, Liv Tyler and Patrick Whitesell hosted a screening of Jersey Girl for The Kenny Gordon Foundation in New York. The film stars Ben Affleck and Jennifer Lopez , with J Lo's adorable look-alike, Raquel Castro, playing J Lo's daughter. Celebs came to the after-party at Metronome, which meant that 10,000 paparazzi were also there. The Kenny Gordon Foundation commemorates a 26-year-old man who died tragically from heart failure. The Foundation donates money to sudden cardiac death research, to full, four year scholarships for economically challenged students at Skidmore College and to Kenny's Kids at Morry's Camp for underprivileged kids. Time is flying by and soon it will be spring. I saw a red breasted robin today, so for sure, spring is around the corner. Let's do some spring shopping!

The Mill at Westhampton and The Mill at Bridgehampton, are one of the largest suppliers of teak garden furniture on Long Island. Look for a very specific collection of French and country furnishings by Marie Albert.

Charos Custom Audio/Video on Carmeron Street has it all for the upcoming season. They specialize in custom audio systems such as plasma flat screen TVs, big screen TVs, home theater systems, phone systems, in the wall speakers, multi room audio systems, hi definition plasma monitors, touch screen systems and more. Stop in and check it out!

At Rose Jewelers on Main Street in Southampton, until March 13, all jewelry and watch repairs are reduced 20% and watch batteries start at $6.99. I have at least three watches that need repair and batteries. Also restringing, resizing and reviving your jewelry are reduced. Now is the time to save some bucks on this one.

For expert hand cleaning and resotoration and appraisals, check out the Antique Rug Galleria on Main Street in Southampton for spring sales and service.

Patio.com, located on Montauk Highway in Southampton, is having a million dollar liquidation sale to make room for the brand new inventory. There is so much to choose from, including a nice selection of Brunswick pool tables. Check it out. There are Leprechaun Lattes and free samples of Irish Crème coffee at The Hampton Coffee Company in Water Mill and East Hampton, all month.) The lattes are done in green for the holiday.

For dresses and special occasions, starting this Sunday at T.J. Maxx in the Bridgehampton Commons look for hot new sales. There are pretty little girls' dresses that are beautifully detailed at unbelievably low prices ($12.99 to $24.99). And for the older gals, WilliSmith spring collection has emerged with a new attitude. The new spring collecation features a colorful mix of contemporary casual fasions, including sweaters, skirts, skorts, pants and much more from $12.99 to $24.99.

At Christian K. Andrews Ltd., importers of fine furnishings and antiques, at 7 Tradesman Path in Bridgehampton, look for new arrivals for spring of consoles, lamps and many accessories. You will love this store.

Hampton Briggs Antiques on Main Street in Bridgehampton are the direct importers of antique Chinese furniture and accessories. This shop is amazing.

Also on Main Street in Bridgehampton at Cate Lewis Jewelry and Accessories stop in and feast your eyes on Cates beautiful selection of precious and semi-precious stone jewelry and timeless pieces for everyday and evening. Cate is offering 20% off many of these items. Look for a colorful variety of bags for spring and summer. Did I say spring and summer? Yeah!

Time is running out and dinner with John tonight at Bobby Van's in Bridgehampton is on the agenda...Love their prix fixe specials...what a bargain!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy St. Patrick's Day Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330. I'd love to hear from you...

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

I'm Tired

Lately I have been feeling constantly. I don't know what has happened. Less than a year ago, I got up in the morning and was excited to be awake. I would get out of bed, jump in the shower and be on full throttle the whole day, all the way through. I would get tired after working out or something, but not the kind of tired where you have to go to sleep, the kind of tired that you get where you feel like you need to put your hands on your knees for a couple of minutes and catch your breath.

I really miss feeling like that.

Today, I am a completely different person. Every night I set my alarm clock for either seven or eight o'clock in the morning, because almost every day of the week, I have to be somewhere at either eight o'clock or nine o'clock.

When the alarm clock goes off at seven, there is no question as to what I will do. I hit the snooze button. Last year, it used to be a debate, whether or not I would hit the snooze button. It was a special occasion when I did. This year, I don't even think about it. It is simply part of my routine.

I think the snooze button is the greatest invention in the world, but also the most stupid. I mean, think about it. If you are going to sleep a little longer, why not just set the alarm a little later?

The snooze button recognizes human laziness. It is such a strange button. I have noticed that for some reason, it is immensely easier to hit the snooze button on alarm clocks than it is to actually turn the alarm clock off completely. I guess this is some kind of alarm clock insurance. The thinking must have been that the alarm would be shut off and the subject would fall back asleep. Hit the snooze button however, and if the subject goes back to sleep, you wake up again. Tada. Got to love the snooze button, baby!

But no, that is not what happens. The snooze button, is more like a psychological battle between man and machine. What really happens is that the subject hits the snooze button, thinking that he will feel like he is getting a whole other night's sleep by hitting that button.

Let's face it. When you go to sleep for a whole evening, it feels like you wake up ten minutes later. When you hit the snooze button, however, you go right back to sleep, almost immediately, for exactly ten minutes.

Unfortunately, ten minutes in the sleep world feels like ten seconds in the real world. The logic fails. So, in reality or sleepality as I like to call it, you wake up ten seconds later. In this situation, I just hit the snooze button again for the second time and so on and so forth, until of course I have reached the point of no snooze return.

This is always trouble, because at this point, I am already late for class, my finance internship, or to do homework before my class. Whatever it is, I am late for it, and I not only feel tired when I get to wherever the heck it is I am going, I also feel like a big jerk. I'll try to avoid eye contact with my professor and play it cool to everyone in the class. But they know. They always know.

I tell ya, man, I have been so tired during the day. I wonder if it has anything to do with the snooze

When In Manhattan...

St. Patrick's Day Parade

Saint Patrick's day is coming. If you're in the city this week or if you're not committed to a particular party, check out the Saint Patrick's Day Parade on Wednesday. It's one of the biggest parties in the city, but it is rooted in a history richer than a pint of Guinness. Maewyn, the man who would one day become St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, was actually born in Wales about AD 385. He considered himself a pagan until he was 16, when he was sold into slavery by a group of Irish marauders that raided his village. During his captivity, he became closer to God. After 6 years of slavery, Maewyn escaped to Gaul where he studied for 12 years in a monastery under St. Germain, bishop of Auxerre. During his training he found that his calling was to convert the pagans to Christianity, as he once had been. Initially, Patrick's (Maewyn's adopted Christian name) wishes to return to Ireland to convert the pagans were denied. His superiors instead appointed St. Palladius. Two years later, Palladius transferred to Scotland. Patrick was then appointed as second bishop to Ireland. Patrick fared well with his quest for converts, which upset the Celtic Druids and subsequently got him arrested more than once. He always escaped. Patrick traveled throughout Ireland, establishing monasteries across the country. He also set up schools and churches to aid him in his conversion of the Irish country. Patrick's mission continued successfully for 30 years, until his retirement to County Down, and his eventual death on March 17 in AD 461. Hence, the date of St. Patrick's Day. Folklore told of Patrick raising the dead, and more famously, driving the snakes from Ireland. It is thought to be a metaphor for converting the pagans. Even the traditional shamrock stems from a tale of how Patrick used the three-leafed shamrock to explain the Trinity. He used it in his sermons to represent how the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit could exist as separate parts of the same unit. His followers adopted the custom of wearing a shamrock on his feast day. The first year St. Patrick's Day was publicly celebrated in America was 1737, in Boston. What was once a religious holiday has become much more about celebrating Irish culture.

The first parade happened in 1766 when Irishmen from the Revolutionary war organized to celebrate their Old World tradition. After the War of 1812, the local Irish fraternal and beneficial societies began sponsoring it. At that time, the small parade went from the Irish meeting halls to the old St. Patrick's Cathedral on Mott and Prince Streets. If you have time, it's still there to visit. In 1851, a Grand Marshall was nominated and the size of the parade grew substantially, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians became the official sponsor.

With the history is out of the way, we can discuss why all of this equals fun. Some view the parade as simply an excuse to get drunk on a Wednesday afternoon. No problem there, but while you're enjoying the festivities along 5th Ave, take a minute from boozing to watch the parade and the people. Where the Macy's Thanksgiving Parade is brimming with floats, cars, balloons and other eye candy, the St. Patrick's sticks to good old-fashioned marching. This is not a bad thing. The procession of bands, cops, and firefighters marches up 5th Avenue, past St. Patrick's Cathedral at 50th Street, all the way beyond the Metropolitan Museum of Art at 83rd Street. Each year the event attracts over 150 thousand revelers, who line the streets and fill the pubs. St. Patrick's Day is one of the few occasions of the year where one can take in the haunting and many times uplifting music of bagpipes and snare drums. It is also one of the few days you can wear a big stupid foam hat and paint your face, in the usually fashion-oriented neighborhood. The last chance was on New Year's in Times Square if you got a hold of one of those orange Discover Card hats, but Times Square is not 5th Avenue by any stretch of the imagination. If you happen to be in Times Square on the night of St. Patty's, check out Irish rock band, Black 47 at B.B. King Blues Club and Grill (237 W42nd) for an all-ages show at 7 and 10pm. They're great. Pop in a Pogues CD, put some beer on ice, or keep your stout at room temperature, and drive in to Manhattan on Wednesday. If you're drinking like most of us, don't drive home. March 17th is about supporting our police, not antagonizing them. Be proud of our city and its protectors, be proud of your heritage if it's there, and remember, on St. Patrick's Day, everyone is Irish.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

My Lexus IS 300 is a car that I consider to be the finest in the Lexus lineup. It's also the least expensive and least understood car they manufacture. This model Lexus is a real enthusiast's car, hard riding, dream handling and set up in every way to slaughter curves. It also has a really clever interior that is a refreshing visual departure from the average car on the market today.

The car has the rather silly name of "Sportcross" but it is really just a swoopy looking station wagon. Typical of Japanese advertising, it just couldn't be called a station wagon, or even a sports wagon, they had to call it something that is confusing and means absolutely nothing. The IS 300 is one of the best all around cars that I have ever owned. The only complaint I have is that the jewel-like speedometer cluster has gauges that are too small to be practical. Also, the boy racer clear lens tail lights don't thrill me. However, mechanically, nothing ever goes wrong. All in all, this is one helluva station wagon

Through the years, I have owned many different types of station wagons and lusted after many others. Often collecting Ford Woody wagons at various times, I have had a '37, '47 '50 and a 1951 model. The appeal of these cars, besides their V-8 flathead motors, was, of course, their wooden bodies. The woodwork was beautifully done, and when properly maintained, it was like driving around in a fine piece of furniture. My $1200 dollar woodies, collector cars now, sell for $50,000. Of course, I sold them many years ago for pennies.

My daily driver was once a Peugeot 404 station wagon, a beautiful wagon, one which may have been designed by PininFarina, but I could be wrong. What I remember most about this Peugeot were the faux wooden floors and the awkward four speed steering column shifter. My other car at the time was a Lotus Super Seven. Two diametrically opposed rides.

Another French car that I have always admired is the Citroen ID/DS 21 series of station wagons.

1946 Ford Woody Wagon

Having owned an ID 19 sedan, I always wanted the wagon, but they were scarce here in the States. Today, both the Peugeot and Citroen wagons are very collectible, but desirable mainly in Europe. Here, most Americans do not even know what they look like. They are both good buys, if you can find one. Pristine examples can be had for around $10,000, with the Citroen being more valuable of the two.

Two other noteworthy wagons are the Volvo Sportwagon (I believe Volvo actually coined that "sportswagon" moniker) and the Fiat 124 wagon. When I was involved in Hertz Rent-A-Car advertising in the ' 60s, I always had access to their first fleet of sports cars. As some of you remember, their rental fleet consisted of the famous Shelby GT-350H Mustangs as well as the Jaguar XKE, Triumph TR-4 and the Volvo P 1800 coupe. Wow. The Volvo P 1800 wagon was virtually the same car as the coupe with an extended wagon body that was accented with an overly large rear window that dropped well below the beltline of the rear hatch. It gave the car a most unusual and attractive look.

The Fiat 124 was one of the most popular cars that the Italian manufacturer ever produced. It began production in 1966. The design and tooling were eventually moved to Russia and sold as the Lada. I believe it is still in production and until a few years ago, a new one could even be bought in Canada. Having spent many happy hours in Italy behind the wheel of a 124, I always admired the simple and shapely station wagon version of this little car. For many years, you could find me tooling around the Hamptons in a Fiat 128 station wagon, which is an even smaller version of the 124. I sold it to a friend in Hampton Bays, where to this day it can be seen terrorizing Vespas.

Perhaps my favorite station wagon of all time is the 1955-57 Chevrolet Nomad. Designed and built by GM at the height of the fifties auto design revolution, it was really done right. That Chevy small block V-8 made beautiful music.

Today, the latest buzz is that more station wagons are going into production.They are a positive alternative to the giant SUVs and boring vans. Chevy may even produce a retro Nomad wagon, an aptly named vehicle for all you happy wanderers heading out to the Hamptons.

An Interactive Thrill Ride

Last weekend, I mysteriously found myself hanging upside down and screaming at the top of my lungs. It is definitely not something I will soon forget. And, in case you are wondering, I did not volunteer for some experimental hoo-ha, or fall asleep after a spicy Mexican meal and dream up the whole fiasco. I actually paid six dollars and fifty cents to hang, dive, flip and fall. And it was worth every penny.

I probably would paid even more for the intense, blow-you-away interactive experience of playing Maverick with my copilot, Iceman, in the flight simulator at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. The rush of zipping, diving, coasting and even nearly crashing blew me away. I reverted to being a five-year-old, screaming with excitement for a whole three minutes. And let's just say that Tom Cruise definitely makes it look a ton easier as he suavely coasts through the air in Top Gun.

But before my copilot and I could embark upon our escapade, we had to be taught how to work the controls. Unfortunately, flying comes naturally to birds, but for humans, it's definitely more of a learned art. Both of us were given a joystick control with a bunch of confusing buttons to familiarize ourselves with. One of us was to steer while the other one was to shoot targets set up on the 58-inch screen in the MaxFlight simulator. As far as I was concerned, the flying would be easy. The only switch I really needed to remember was the "steal the control" button, which would take the flying control from my copilot, unbeknownst to him. Sneaky, sneaky, sneaky.

We climbed into our two-person craft and were strapped in by the employee who was not fazed by the growing anxiety on our faces. He told us about the emergency "off" switch in his monotone voice and closed the hatch. The silver box began to shake and we took off on our aerobatic ride. That's about when I realized that flying was not as simple as I had thought. Whenever I flew the plane up towards the heavens, we couldn't see the targets on the ground below us. Meanwhile, if I positioned the plane so we could see the targets, it felt as though the plane was going to graze the hills below. No happy medium.

Suddenly Maverick's controls were stolen by Iceman, and that meant war. He tumbled and tossed us around until I got my bearings and snatched the flying controls back. Now I would teach him a lesson. Pulling up on the joystick, I flew us straight up and up and up. Then I turned sharply to the right and further to the right, so that we were spiraling continually through the air into an endless spinning abyss. Not only that, but it wasn't just the screen that was spinning. The entire craft was tumbling round and round while the two of us screamed like little girls.

The 360-degree spinning experience was not really appreciated by my stomach, however, so I eventually leveled out the joystick and took a breather. And as I was watching the blue water and blue sky rush by us on the screen ahead, I felt proud. I had won the war and held onto the controls. I had taught him a lesson. I gloatingly looked over at Iceman and smiled. He looked back and said, "I have one question. Why are our ground targets now above us?"

Needless to say, the next time I pull $6.50 out of the piggy bank to take a thrilling ride on the MaxFlight Simulator, it will be as Iceman, not as Maverick. –Clara Jablonski button, or my sleeping habits in general. I am a zombie. My eyes during the day will water if I do not squint them a little bit. It is even worse when I am doing something that is boring.

It's all backwards, isn't it? I will feel like my head is going to hit the floor if I am doing boring work. But put me in front of an episode of "Seinfeld," a conversation with a friend, or an epic video game battle, and I can go until five in the morning. Why is this? If it were up to me, while I was being made, I would have asked to feel more alert doing the boring stuff and less alert doing the fun stuff. After all, the boring stuff is what makes us "productive."

I don't know what happened to me. Maybe I have some sort of new disease that is rapidly eating away at my body, starting off with my muscles, which is making me weaker and feeling more tired. I really hope that this is not the case.

I have talked to my doctor about it. I said to him, "I have been feeling a lot more tired than I used to. I never used to be tired like this."

"Yeah, that happened to me when I was in my twenties, too." He responded.

I was a little bummed with this answer. I thought that he was going to tell me that he was concerned and that I probably had contracted this terrible new tired disease that was affecting millions of people with no current cure.

Well, if you think about it, he kind of did say that.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Rare Beauty of Snake Mouth

What a privilege to live on the East End of Long Island where the soil, sun, and moist atmosphere are great for gardening. And, East End gardening is a welcome change from the stress and energy of New York City. At the same time, it is a shame some native species have long ago become threatened or extinct, and are no longer part of the natural terrain. One such species is the most beautiful and fragrant of native orchids: Snake Mouth, more technically known as the Rose Pogonia (Pogonia ophioglossoides).

A few devoted individuals may still propagate this gem in private bog gardens, along streams, or in greenhouses, but the natural occurrence of the orchid is thought to have died out more than two decades ago. Because the orchid does not produce flowers every year, it has not been in high demand by gardeners.

Nevertheless, passionate gardeners have a way of being "opportunistic" and are one reason populations of Rose Pogonia, which used to exist throughout the eastern portion of the U.S., have been decimated. (Treading on habitats and compacting soil seem to be one reason the orchid dies out.) The orchid has been protected as a threatened species by the Federal Register since about 1994. However, the populations of Snake Mouth continue to dwindle along the Eastern seaboard. Today, there are, perhaps, fifty documented, natural colonies of the orchid in existence.

The genus name Pogonia draws from the Greek word "Pogon" meaning beard. It aptly describes the intricately fringed lip of the flower that is bright rose or pink. The genus Pogonia contains about 10 species, mostly distributed throughout East Asia. The Rose Pogonia is the only member of this genus found in North America. The epithet ophioglossoides refers to the similarity between the leaves of this species and those of the fern genus Ophioglossum.

The Rose Pogonia produces a single (sometimes double), rose-colored bloom that is held aloft at the top of a solitary stem. The plant is usually about 8 inches tall but may reach 12 inches tall if conditions are right. The flower is typically 2 inches to 4 inches in length. The flower produces the fragrance of "delicate raspberry." From literature, it is said the writer Thoreau likened the plant fragrance to the "smell of a snake," which may account for its common name.

In natural settings, the Snake Mouth orchid is found growing in acidic situations where there are open sphagnum moss bogs and/or wet meadows. It is also found in sandy, swampy areas where oak leaves abound. The plant produces a single, ribbed leaf in addition to its large, bright flower. Flowering occurs sometime between mid-April to mid-June, with the flowers lasting only a few days to about a week. The plant does not flower annually, which partly accounts for why people overlook it and/or inadvertently destroy habitat. (The plant is nondescript when not in bloom.)

Little is known about how the Snake Mouth reproduces. It is not certain if the plant is self-pollinated or, as with other native orchids, bumblebees perform this service. When pollination does occur, a capsule is formed that can contain several thousand minute seeds. It is thought that seeds are distributed by the wind. Once seeds find a suitable footing in a swampy area with adequate nutrition, it may take as long as ten years to produce a viable plant.

Snake Mouth typically forms large, diffuse colonies as a result of its method of spreading. The plant sends out long, thin runners through the upper layers of the substrate. At intervals, when the plant finds a hospitable spot with adequate nutrition and light, adventitious buds lead to the formation of new plants. The plant may also be somewhat dependent on a symbiotic relationship with fungus in the soil.

In contrast to its dwindling numbers, the Rose Pogonia is easily grown in a small, artificial bog, or in damp, wet, soil that has an adequate amount of sphagnum, peat, and/or spent leaves. It prefers full sun. The plant does quite well in a plastic pot filled with Sphagnum moss, and requires cultivation similar to the popular carnivorous plants on the market, such as the Pitcher plant. If the plant is cultivated, it is important that it is never dries out because the delicate roots will die. The plant also requires some fertilizing every three or four months.

The only way to bring back this horticultural gem to the East End is for gardeners to invest in propagated plants and slowly restore them to the wild. Unfortunately, plants that are returned to swamps are desirable forage for deer and must also be protected with screening. For those interested in growing the Rose Pogonia, artificially cultivated plants can be obtained through a number of sites on the Internet. We believe Carson Whitlow of the company called Cyp Haven produces some of the best stock.

At Rock Cottage, we like the idea of having a few, unusual and compelling plants to provide fodder for weekend conversations. We also like the idea of re-establishing to the wild one of our most beautiful native orchids. Rose Pogonia certainly provides the criteria on all counts. It is also a worthy investment to help preserve this natural wonder, and offer "the sweet smell of Snake Mouth!"

Coming Home...It's Time To Repair And Refresh

Punxutawney Phil saw his shadow on Groundhog Day. So did Long Island woodchucks Holtsville Hal and Malverne Mel and Melissa. Verdict: spring isn't exactly peeking around the corner. But no matter. The approaching weeks present the idea opportunity to...get...ready. Because nothing beats the feeling of opening the windows and clearing away the dust as you prepare to open your home for the upcoming season.

So starting from the top and working our way down, we'll take a look at common spring fix-its. Most are easy enough to tackle in a weekend, leaving you more time to plan for a wonderful summer. And even if you don't own a vacation get-away just yet, giving your house a maintenance makeover can help turn it into a summer haven.

Rain Gutter Repairs. Nobody likes to clean or repair gutters. However, clogged downspouts hold a lot of water, which can eventually back up into the roof, causing damage. Dig out bigger debris and flush downspouts with a garden hose.

Check the Roof while you are up there for possible damage caused by snow and ice during the winter. Snow and ice are hard on roofs and can damage shingles, so it is wise to take a thorough look. For safety reasons, it may be a good idea to hire a contractor to inspect the roof for you.

Windows and Doors. Clean and lubricate as necessary using a light oil-based lubricant. Make sure windows and doors are properly sealed by "scoping out" the exterior caulk situation. Sealing these joints will help prevent the loss of cool air and allow less warm air in, which can result in substantial air conditioning savings.

Attic Fans and Turbine-Vents. Both are important in reducing moisture and heat build up as well as reducing summer cooling costs. Check for clear and easy movement of moving parts and lubricate where necessary to ensure continued smooth operation.

Trim Back Tree Branches and Shrubs. Tree branches over and/or touching your roof can cause damage to your shingles and contribute to a big mess in your gutters. Shrubs growing too thick and/or close to your house can trap moisture, which can ruin your siding and contribute to foundation problems.

Inspect Basement and/or Crawl Space Walls. Excess moisture in the basement can cause structural damage and even cause buckling in wood floors on the next level up. Look extra close at any cracks for signs of leakage.

Check Pipes and Drains. Inspect water supply lines and valves to sinks and toilets for any leaks. Contact a qualified professional to fix any problems because repairing as soon as possible saves a lot of water costs over time and helps prevent further damage.

Inspect Driveway, Sidewalk, Patio for Cracks. It's a given — concrete always cracks, but that doesn't mean you have to live that way. Besides, these cracks allow water to soften the ground underneath and will cause more cracking.

Clean and Seal Decks. This will maintain the deck's appearance and provide protection against the elements, which will prolong the life of your deck.

Clear Yard of Downed Tree Branches and Debris. Leaving these items on your lawn will kill grass and cause other damage as well. The earlier you clear branches, leaves and other debris, the healthier your lawn will be all summer long.

Clean Clothes Dryer Vent System. Clean lint from the dryer to the exterior vent cap. Lint is incredibly flammable and poses a fire risk. If a gas clothes dryer is not properly vented, it can force carbon monoxide back into the home and that can be deadly.

Hire a Professional to Inspect and Clean Chimney. Now is a great time to inspect your fireplace and chimney. Look around for visible cracks, nesting animals or other signs of damage. Use this opportunity to have a professional chimney sweep clean your chimney, check it thoroughly and make any necessary repairs.

Inspect or Install Automatic-Light Timers, Motion-Detector Systems. This will help deter burglars from your home, especially important if you are away a lot.

Test Smoke Alarms and Carbon Monoxide Detectors to make sure they're working and remember to replace batteries yearly.

Finally, review your safety plan for evacuation in case of fire. By having a plan of action that you and your household members prepare in advance, you may gain valuable time during an emergency. Above all, taking the time to perform these maintenance checks will give you the peace of mind to enjoy a safe, cool and healthy summer season. –Aurrice Duke

We Are What We Eat

Pssst, when was the last time you ordered some kind of fast food? Go on, admit it, you probably indulge once in a while, right? After all, America is a fast food nation and these are the days of super sized portions. But if you're partial to the occasional Big Mac and fries, you might want to check out Morgan Spurlock's recent documentary film – "Super Size Me." Fast food might not look quite so appetizing after you've watched 90 minutes of Spurlock, the guinea pig for his own movie, chronicle 30 days of eating a diet consisting purely of McDonalds. In just a month, Spurlock gains 25 pounds, has to combat severe mood swings and nausea, and is given warnings from doctors about rising cholesterol and liver toxicity, among other health issues. He doesn't look so hot in the end, either. The documentary will be released in theaters in May, and you can learn more about it by visiting www.supersizeme.com.

But don't wait until then to think about what you put in to your mouth. We are what we eat and the sooner we take that into consideration, the happier and healthier we'll be. Not to mention the fact that we're sure to look better. Studies show that eating the right food can also help to fight the aging process, prevent wrinkles and make your skin glow. Even health and beauty specialists have jumped on the food wagon, like N. V. Perricone, M.D. Cosmeceuticals, who promises an instant facelift with his three-day nutritional food program. He says that if you eat the wrinkle free way you'll not only look better, but you'll feel better. See Dr. Perricone's 3-day Nutritional facelift menu at www.nvperriconemd.com.

Whilst a three-day food-filled facelift might be appetizing, healthy eating is more of a lifestyle, according to Steven Pratt, M.D, who wrote "SuperFoods Rx : Fourteen Foods That Will Change Your Life." The Hamptons, where most embrace healthy living anyway, is the perfect place to eat right. So you've got no excuses.

Take a green leafy out of Pratt's book. Spring is here and summer's around the corner. Try my favorite thing to do, visit the farmers market in Amagansett. The produce not only looks amazing, but just walking among it makes me feel healthy. In summertime, one can hardly go a block without seeing an abundance of farm stands with delectable fruits and vegetables bursting with color and goodness. Additionally, the arrival of Citarella and other gourmet stores makes it as easy, after a long day at the beach, to embrace healthy-eating as it is to scarf down processed fast food.

So next time you go grocery shopping, or feel a rumble in your tummy, put something healthy in your body. To get you started, here are some health and beauty food choices Pratt suggests you consider:

- Watermelon – makes your skin look healthier and raises the SPF of your skin
- Apples – the skin of an apple is what makes your skin look healthy
- Pumpkin – gives you a healthy glow and again is good for the skin and helps prevent wrinkles.
- Blueberries – are good for the brain
- Green and White Tea – contains antioxidants, helps with general health (we did a feature here a few weeks ago about tea)
- Tomatoes – the actual tomato, is wonderful, but also try tomato paste and even spaghetti sauce

Butt – I Don't Feel Like Going To The Gym...

I'm sitting at my desk in front of the computer thinking about going to the gym. I've already missed two classes at The Sag Harbor Gym.

It's raining out. I can't go for a run. My friend Carol is taking Latin Aerobics, and she tells me I shouldn't miss this, either.

"I don't feel like being told to move left, then right," I say.

"Okay. Why don't you come and do the elliptical?"

"Maybe I'll catch up with you. If you don't see me, call when your class finishes."

I just don't feel like getting off my butt. I wish Carol could take my butt with her, since she is going, anyway. Not only is it raining, it's foggy too. Although it's warm – almost 50 degrees (reminding me that I don't want my butt to be sagging along the beach at Sagg Main this summer), I'm too lazy to drag it to the gym.

I walk over to my bookshelf and pick up a vintage (1987) book by Denise Austin called 1-Minute Exercises that I just bought at a yard sale. I turn to the isometric section. Isometric's appeal is that it can be done anywhere, at anytime, and involves a lot of tensing and relaxing muscles. I remember my mother doing these for her facial muscles, before she decided to have a facelift.

I return to my desk, and sit down to see what I can accomplish from this position.

For starters, Denise suggests I pull one knee at a time up to my chin as if I was going to give a little peck to my kneecap. I do 3 sets.

Next, I try her 1-Minute Breast Lift. Making two fists, I press the knuckles of each hand together in front of my breasts, keeping my elbows straight out to the side. Now, I push my knuckles together holding for the count of 10. I really can feel my chest muscles working. I repeat

3x. Denise promises firm pecs and good posture if done regularly.

I'm on to her 1-Minute Press-up. With my arms pressed tight to my sides, I grab the chair next to my thighs and I lift my entire body off the chair keeping my knees bent (as if still seated) and back straight. I repeat as she suggests 3x. This is harder than I expect.

Now I'm browsing through cyberspace to see if I can find some suggestions from fitness gurus in this millennium. While the copy of Austin's book I have may be vintage, apparently isometrics are still popular.

I surf my way to a program called Get Fit While You Sit, and find a variation of Austin's knee kissing warm-up. This one is designed to trim abs. Moving forward to the edge of my chair (careful not to topple over) I place my hands behind my head and lift my left leg while lowering my right elbow "down and in" toward the inside of my left knee. The goal is to touch my elbow to the inside of my knee. I repeat this on the other side.

Another site, www.exercise.about.com describes many different isometric exercises for the glutes. Finally, I get my butt out of the chair to do the standing squat; at least I don't have to drag it to the gym. I squat down, keeping my knees over my toes, with my arms extended out in front, I come up, extending one leg to the rear, again keeping my hands to the front for balance. The instructions say I can "alternate legs, or work the same leg for set repetitions then swap sides."

The phone rings. It's Carol, she's finished with her class, and I tell her I've worked out too. She starts to quiz me, I tell her I'll explain and we agree to meet for coffee. Now getting my butt out doesn't feel so bad.

- Beans – help blood sugar
- Broccoli – has great health and beauty benefits, helps prevent cancer. Also try broccoli sprouts that are really good in salads
- Oatmeal – lowers cholesterol
- Oranges – give us vitamin C
- Wild Salmon – this is the very best food you can eat. Dr. Pratt recommends eating it four times a week. It has cardiac-related benefits and helps with wrinkles. Plus there's no shortage of fish in the Hamptons.
- Soy – is complete protein and if you cook it with something else, it'll assume the flavor of the other ingredients. So don't say you don't like the taste of it.
- Green Leafy vegetables – are all great for vision. A good one to try is Swiss chard
- Nuts – a handful of nuts are great each day. But don't have too many. Only a handful.
- Bread – make sure that it has added fiber – croissants don't have any fiber at all.

Note that: Processed foods like white flour, pastries, bread, etc. cause wrinkles!

Remember, your body is a temple, treat it with respect and it will serve you well.

Police Blotter

A Patchogue woman called police in East Hampton last week after discovering that her car had been broken into while parked at a Three Mile Harbor Road, East Hampton residence. Her tears fell unwiped as she listed the stolen items; a box of tissues and 10 cassette tapes, collectively worth $102.50. According to police, someone broke the driver's side window to gain access to the 2004 Kia sometime between midnight and 3 a.m. last Sunday. It will cost the woman $200 to replace the shattered window.

Another report was filed that day regarding the same incident. This time a Montauk woman fell victim to the same unknown suspect. She too reported a broken driver's side window while parked at the same Three Mile Harbor Road residence. Stolen from inside was a $400 CD player and a $16 CD. Her window will also cost $200 to replace.

Another car was broken into this past week. This time the thief broke a rear window and removed a wallet and purse, causing $135 in loss and damages. Among the wallet contents were two credit cards, a driver's license and a check book, all of which were canceled the next day.

In efforts to achieve a drug-free Hamptons, the Southampton Town Police Department arrested two men last week on drug charges. The first, a Southold man, was tracked down and arrested in Riverhead with the assistance of Riverhead Town Police officers. The second, a 30-year-old Hampton Bays man, was arrested the next day in Hampton Bays. Both men were taken into custody after selling cocaine to undercover agents. The Southampton Town Police Department continues its ongoing operation and now has 15 out of the 16 targeted drug dealers in custody.

Garbage is garbage, right? According to an employee of the Montauk Transfer Station, a team of construction workers dropped off some garbage that they didn't want. According to police, the man told the workers that they'd have to take their garbage elsewhere, but they ignored him and dumped it anyway. The Transfer Station employee told police that he needed the report for Code Enforcement who would follow through with the investigation.

Police are trying to track down someone who has stolen stones from a Montauk man. The Monroe Drive resident called police on Saturday when he realized his pile of driveway gravel that had been delivered last month was gone. According to the man, the gravel groper struck some time in February. Police are investigating.

A fight broke out in the Star Room parking lot last weekend in Wainscott. A Southampton woman called police the next day when she woke up with a black eye and a small laceration on her abdomen. Police are questioning the known parties involved.

HISTORICAL ACCURACY

Dear Dan,

Your article in the March 5 issue about the "spider mill" sign helped solve a puzzle I encountered a couple of years ago while reading a copy of a book I picked up at a garage sale entitled "Memories of Old Bridgehampton", first published in 1916 (Library of Congress number 62-20908). A passage on pages 224-25 reads:

"Mr. Hildreth also wrote that after Pierson & Co. gave up the mill on Sag stream, Pierson & Hildreth built a 'spider-legged mill', which stood there a century ago, and that Peter Hildreth tended it at the time of the Revolution. It was to the wheel of this mill that Major Cocrane had William Russel tied up when he was whipped, and 'Henry Squires' grandmother was a girl and lived near the schoolhouse and saw the whipping. She said the blood was running down to Russel's heels.'"

This refers to an earlier passage at page 132, where the author, in describing the troubled relations that existed between "lawless" British troops and the locals during the Revolution, wrote:

"Major Cochrane...once caused a peaceable and inoffensive man, William Russell by name, to be tied up and whipped till the blood ran down to his feet, and this with no adequate provocation."

Major Cochrane is described as "notorious" and Judge Hedges is said to have written of him, "No man more vial, no man more brutal", ever existed.

Reading this, and seeing no reference whatsoever to Andre, despite the sign you identified, left me puzzled and curious. I was therefore glad your article cleared things up.

I hope you can pass this along to those who helped you on the article.

QUIET PLEASE

Dear Dan,

I guess I was "born too soon", i.e., I hold to certain values and conventions which seem to have fallen out of favor. I guess I "just don't get it", as they say.

I'm sitting in a local library, on the South Fork of Eastern Long Island, New York. It is rife with people running around, bringing back and taking out books. They are busy using the computers, reading the magazines one after the other, nipping in and out of the bathroom, and scanning the titles of books perched on endless shelves.

As good as the staff is, they are usually quite busy, and do not have that extra time at their disposal to admonish people displaying deplorable manners (you know, the kind that think the library is theirs and they can act/do just as they please, despite the fact that they are surrounded by other members of the tax paying public who have the right to some peace and quiet). You'd think that these self-absorbed characters might remember what a library is for, or, what rights other people have.

So, I'm sitting at one of the tables, reading (am I permitted?)...Which is also fairly close to a computer station (is that my fault?)...A frazzled lady (is her personal life my responsibility?)...Sits down and her cell phone goes off in the pocket of her parka. She takes about thirty seconds to find it, and then another fifteen seconds to figure how to turn it off. That is almost a minute I have to put down my book since I cannot fathom what I am reading while this ridiculous honky-tonk tune is blaring just a few feet away from my right ear.

She offers an insincere, well-rehearsed apology, to which I say sarcastically, "yeah, they flog people for that, down in the torture vault, at sundown before the entire town, with a cat-of-nine-tails", as a way to let her know I am really aggravated, but also with a little humor to give her some room to move in, apologize, and turn it off. What does she do? She goes back to the computer with the phone in her other hand, and rings up her husband, and blathers on about when aunt Gertie is arriving from Manhattan, and what room she should be using. Apparently, her husband is hard of hearing, or maybe, she thinks she is making an announcement at the Town Board meeting. Not that she should be using the cell phone in the first place, but if you insist on being a first class idiot, do it quietly....

Next, a man sits down at the adjoining computer, eating an apple; you know the kind that crackles and pops when a bite is removed? It also leaves off a pungent odor. He also "slurps" a lot. I now had forgotten what I was reading.

With these kinds of people, a 'NO CELL PHONE' sign would seem an effort in vain. And, since when does one pack his lunch when going to the library? I suppose it's all right, if you are "special".

Finally, a quarreling couple sits down at my table, only to become louder as their debate finds no solution.

Finally, I "lose it"...I lean over with my face not four feet from theirs, and yell, "PLEASE?" whereupon everybody looks at me, as the eye of the storm, i.e., the idiot, trouble maker, the anti-social, you-know-what. The man walks away, motioning her to follow, but she elects to remain, while giving me a non-stop sneer. He looks at me from where he has escaped to, repeating her sneer, for God knows what. Two, sneering and unhappy idiots, faulting me for getting angry because they made so much noise I could not read or think, two activities libraries have been developed to accommodate, for decades if not longer.

As they say, "what's wrong with this picture?" I guess, as I said in my first opening lines, "I just don't get it".

When a taxpayer's right to library quietude is compromised by idiots from "away", or, by year round denizens who have come to forget the quality of life they supposedly champion, maybe it's time to travel north and/or west a bit in hopes of finding fishermen, farmers, and no locks on anything. If not in Noyac and North Sea, I hear that Greenport is holding its own. When/if the "Citiots" find this spot as well, I could always move over to Fishers Island...

STAGE CREDIT

Dear Dan,

On behalf of all of us, many thanks for the wonderful and prominent coverage you gave the Drama League in your column on Barry Gordin's photo pages.

We are always grateful to have the work we do recognized – as a longtime fan and loyal "Dan reader," it was a thrill for me.

Again, many thanks and I will keep you posted on our work and upcoming events.

PHONY PHONE NUMBER

Dear Dan,

In your March 5 issue, someone named Joyce wanted to know how to reach the Southampton Animal Shelter. Your answer (631-283-1094) was wrong. That number in fact belongs to my Animal Hospital, The Southampton Animal Hospital on Bishop's Lane in Southampton. The Southampton Town Animal Shelter is in Hampton Bays. Its phone number is 631-728-PETS. Please print a correction in your next issue (and perhaps issue a mild reprimand to your researcher).

Songwriter seeks collaborator(s). After a 15 year hiatus during which I established a successful non-music business; former major label record producer & published/recorded songwriter seeks counterparts in Sag, EH, etc., on weekends to jointly write, arrange and record. I write both words and music (but again, the ideal collaborator also writes both), I sing, play guitar and keys. You in addition to being an accomplished writer & perhaps a good singer, are some combination of an accomplished musician, programmer and hard disk recording whiz. My goal is to find the great writing partner I never had 15 years ago and to produce some good work. Send an email link to a couple of your songs (gxw@aol.com), or send to Box 2691, Sag Harbor, NY 11963
